

MS. EDITH BROWN WEISS

Francis Cabell Brown Professor of International Law, Georgetown University Law Center

Edith Brown Weiss is an outstanding legal scholar who has taught and published widely on issues of international law and especially international environmental law. She is the Francis Cabell Brown Professor of International Law at Georgetown University Law Center, where she has been on the faculty since 1978. In September 2002, she was appointed to a five year term at the Inspection Panel of the World Bank, and served as the Chairperson of the Panel from August 2003 through August 2007, an appointment at the Vice Presidential level. Before Georgetown, she was a professor of civil engineering and politics at Princeton University.

She has won many prizes for her work, including the Elizabeth Haub prize from the Free University of Brussels and the International Union for the Conservation of Nature (IUCN) for international environmental law, the American Bar Association Award to an individual for distinguished achievements in Environmental Law and Policy, the Center for International Environmental Law's international award for international environmental law, and the American Society of International Law's Certificate of Merit given to the most creative scholarship in international law in the previous year. Her book In Fairness to Future Generations, for which she won the ASIL award, has been published in English, French, Spanish, Japanese and Chinese. She has also received other awards for her books and articles.

Ms. Brown Weiss served as President of the American Society of International Law from 1994 – 1996, and as Associate General Counsel for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, where she established the Division of International Law. She is a member of many editorial boards, including those of the American Journal of International Law and the Journal of International Economic Law. Professor Brown Weiss has been a director, trustee, or advisor for the Cousteau Society, the Center for International Environmental Law, Japanese Institute for Global Environmental Strategies, and the National Center for Atmospheric Research, among others. Professor Brown Weiss has been a Special Legal Advisor to the North American Commission on Environmental Cooperation. She has been a member of the U.S. National Academy of Sciences' Commission on Geosciences, Environment, and Resources, the Water Science and Technology Board, the Environmental Studies Board, and the Committee on Sustainable Water Supplies in the Middle East. She serves on the Editorial Advisory Board for the new edition of the Encyclopedia of International Law, prepared by the Max Planck Institute in Germany. She is an elected member of the American Law Institute, the Council on Foreign Relations, the International Council on Environmental Law, and the IUCN Commission on Environmental Law, for which she is a member of the Steering Committee.

She received a Bachelor's of Arts degree from Stanford University with Great Distinction, an LL.B. (J.D.) from Harvard Law School, a Ph.D. in political science from the University of California at Berkeley, and an Honorary Doctor of Laws from Chicago-Kent College of Law.