2 Ibid., Fifteenth Session, Supplement No. 16 (A/4846), p. 66.

Observing that, in the Convention on the non-applicability of statutory limitations to war crimes and crimes against humanity, "inhuman acts resulting from the policy of apartheid" are qualified as crimes against humanity,

Observing that the General Assembly of the United Nations has adopted a number of resolutions in which the policies and practices of apartheid are condemned as a crime against humanity,

Observing that the Security Council has emphasized that apartheid and its continued intensification and expansion seriously disturb and threaten international peace and security,

Convinced that an International Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid would make it possible to take more effective measures at the international and national levels with a view to the suppression and punishment of the crime of apartheid,

Have agreed as follows:

Article I. 1. The States Parties to the present Convention declare that apartheid is a crime against humanity and that inhuman acts resulting from the policies and practices of apartheid and similar policies and practices of racial segregation and discrimination, as defined in article II of the Convention, are crimes violating the principles of international law, in particular the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations, and constituting a serious threat to international peace and security.

2. The States Parties to the present Convention declare criminal those organizations, institutions and individuals committing the crime of apartheid.

Article II. Reaffirming in this regard its decision in resolution 808 (1993) that an international tribunal shall be established for the prosecution of persons responsible for serious violations of international humanitarian law committed in the territory of the former Yugoslavia since 1991,

Considering that, pending the appointment of the Prosecutor of the International Tribunal, the Commission of Experts established pursuant to resolution 780 (1992) should continue on an urgent basis the collection of information relating to evidence of grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions and other violations of international humanitarian law as proposed in its interim report (S/25774),

3. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the judges of the International Tribunal, upon their election, any suggestions received from States for the rules of procedure and evidence called for in Article 15 of the Statute of the International Tribunal; functioning of the International Tribunal at the earliest time and to report periodically to the Council;

RESOLUTION 955 (1994)
Adopted by the Security Council at its 3453rd meeting, on 8 November 1994

The Security Council,

Reaffirming all its previous resolutions on the situation in Rwanda,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General pursuant to paragraph 3 of resolution 935 (1994) of 1 July 1994 (S/1994/879 and S/1994/906), and having taken note of the reports of the Special Rapporteur for Rwanda of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights (S/1994/1157, annex I and annex II),

Expressing appreciation for the work of the Commission of Experts established pursuant to resolution 935 (1994), in particular its preliminary report on violations of international humanitarian law in Rwanda transmitted by the Secretary-General's letter of 1 October 1994 (S/1994/1125),

Expressing once again its grave concern at the reports indicating that genocide and other systematic, widespread and flagrant violations of international humanitarian law have been committed in Rwanda,

Determining that this situation continues to constitute a threat to international peace and security,

Determined to put an end to such crimes and to take effective measures to bring to justice the persons who are responsible for them,

Convinced that in the particular circumstances of Rwanda, the prosecution of persons responsible for serious violations of international humanitarian law would enable this aim to be achieved and would contribute to the process of national reconciliation and to the restoration and maintenance of peace, the United Nations and the State of the seat, acceptable to the Council, having regard to the fact that the International Tribunal may meet away from its seat when it considers it necessary for the efficient exercise of its functions; and decides that an office will be established and proceedings will be conducted in Rwanda, where feasible and appropriate, subject to the conclusion of similar appropriate arrangements;

7. Decides to consider increasing the number of judges and Trial Chambers of the International Tribunal if it becomes necessary;

8. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Annex III

Understandings regarding the amendments to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court on the crime of aggression

Referrals by the Security Council
1. It is understood that the Court may exercise jurisdiction on the basis of a Security Council referral in accordance with article 13, paragraph (b), of the Statute only with respect to crimes of aggression committed after a decision in accordance with article 15 ter, paragraph 3, is taken, and one year after the ratification or acceptance of the amendments by thirty States Parties, whichever is later.
2. It is understood that the Court shall exercise jurisdiction over the crime of aggression on the basis of a Security Council referral in accordance with article 13, paragraph (b), of the Statute irrespective of whether the State concerned has accepted the Court’s jurisdiction in this regard.

Jurisdiction ratione temporis
3. It is understood that in case of article 13, paragraph (a) or (c), the Court may exercise its jurisdiction only with respect to crimes of aggression committed after a decision in accordance with article 15 bis, paragraph 3, is taken, and one year after the ratification or acceptance of the amendments by thirty States Parties, whichever is later.

Domestic jurisdiction over the crime of aggression
4. It is understood that the amendments that address the definition of the act of aggression and the crime of aggression do so for the purpose of this Statute only. The amendments shall, in accordance with article 10 of the Rome Statute, not be interpreted as limiting or prejudicing in any way existing or developing rules of international law for purposes other than this Statute.
5. It is understood that the amendments shall not be interpreted as creating the right or obligation to exercise domestic jurisdiction with respect to an act of aggression committed by another State.

Other understandings
6. It is understood that aggression is the most serious and dangerous form of the illegal use of force; and that a determination whether an act of aggression has been committed requires consideration of all the circumstances of each particular case, including the gravity of the act concerned and their consequences, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations.
7. It is understood that in establishing whether an act of aggression constitutes a manifest violation of the Charter of the United Nations, the three components of character, gravity and scale must be sufficient to justify a “manifest” determination. No one component can be significant enough to satisfy the manifest standard by itself.

AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE UNITED NATIONS AND THE GOVERNMENT OF SIERRA LEONE ON THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A SPECIAL COURT FOR SIERRA LEONE

Whereas the Security Council, in its resolution 1315 (2000) of 14 August 2000, expressed deep concern at the very serious crimes committed within the territory of Sierra Leone against the people of Sierra Leone and United Nations and associated personnel and at the prevailing situation of impunity;

International Court of Justice

Arrest Warrant of 11 April 2000
(Democratic Republic of the Congo v. Belgium)
Judgment

I.C.J. Reports 2002

CASE CONCERNING THE ARREST WARRANT OF 11 APRIL 2000

(DEMOCRATIC REPUBLIC OF THE CONGO v. BELGIUM)

Facts of the case — Issue by a Belgian investigating magistrate of "an international arrest warrant in absentia" against the incumbent Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Congo, alleging grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions of 1949 and of the Additional Protocols thereto and crimes against humanity — International circulation of arrest warrant through Interpol — Person concerned subsequently ceasing to hold office as Minister for Foreign Affairs.

First objection of Belgium — Jurisdiction of the Court — Statute of the Court, Article 36, paragraph 2 — Existence of a "legal dispute" between the Parties at the time of filing of the Application instituting proceedings — Events subsequent to the filing of the Application do not deprive the Court of jurisdiction.

Second objection of Belgium — Mootness — Fact that the person concerned had ceased to hold office as Minister for Foreign Affairs does not put an end to the dispute between the Parties and does not deprive the Application of its object.

Third objection of Belgium — Admissibility — Facts underlying the Application instituting proceedings not changed in a way that transformed the dispute originally brought before the Court into another which is different in character.

Fourth objection of Belgium — Admissibility — Congo not acting in the context of protection of one of its nationals — Inapplicability of rules relating to exhaustion of local remedies.

Subsidiary argument of Belgium — Non ultra peti a rule — Claim in Application instituting proceedings that Belgians claim to exercise a universal jurisdiction in issuing the arrest warrant is contrary to international law — Claim not made in final submissions of the Congo — Court unable to rule on that ques-

THE COURT,

composed as above,
after deliberation,

delivers the following Judgment:

1. On 17 October 2000 the Democratic Republic of the Congo (hereinafter referred to as "the Congo") filed in the Registry of the Court an Application institution proceedings against the Kingdom of Belgium (hereinafter referred to as "Belgium") in respect of a dispute concerning an "international arrest warrant issued on 11 April 2000 by a Belgian investigating judge . . . against the Minister for Foreign Affairs in office of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Mr. Abdylaye Verodia Ndombasi".

In that Application the Congo contended that Belgium had violated the "principle that a State may not exercise its authority on the territory of another State", the "principle of sovereign equality among all Members of the United Nations, as laid down in Article 2, paragraph 1, of the Charter of the United Nations"); as well as "the diplomatic immunity of the Minister for Foreign Affairs of a sovereign State, as recognized by the jurisprudence of the Court and following from Article 41, paragraph 2, of the Vienna Convention of 18 April 1961 on Diplomatic Relations".

In order to found the Court's jurisdiction the Congo invoked in the aforementioned Application the fact that "Belgium had accepted the jurisdiction of the Court and, in so far as may be required, the [aforementioned] Application signified its acceptance of that jurisdiction by the Democratic Republic of the Congo".

2. Pursuant to Article 40, paragraph 2, of the Statute, the Application was forthwith communicated to the Government of Belgium by the Registrar; and, in accordance with paragraph 3 of that Article, all States entitled to appear before the Court were notified of the Application.

3. Since the Court included upon the Bench no judge of the nationality of either of the Parties, each Party proceeded to exercise the right conferred by Article 31, paragraph 3, of the Statute to choose a judge ad hoc to sit in the case; the Congo chose Mr. Sayman Bula-Bula, and Belgium Ms Christiane Van den Wyngaert.

4. On 17 October 2000, the day on which the Application was filed, the Government of the Congo also filed in the Registry of the Court a request for the indication of a provisional measure based on Article 41 of the Statute of the Court. At the hearings on that request, Belgium, for its part, asked that the case be removed from the List.

By Order of 8 December 2000 the Court, on the one hand, rejected Belgium's request that the case be removed from the List and, on the other, held that the circumstances, as they then presented themselves to the Court, were not such as to require the exercise of its power under Article 41 of the Statute to indicate provisional measures. In the same Order, the Court: also held that "it [was] desirous that the issues before the Court should be determined as soon as possible" and that "it [was] therefore appropriate to ensure that a decision on the Congo's Application be reached with all expedition".

5. By Order of 13 December 2000, the President of the Court, taking account of the agreement of the Parties as expressed at a meeting held with their Agents on 8 December 2000, fixed time-limits for the filing of a Memorial by the Congo and of a Counter-Memorial by Belgium, addressing both issues of jurisdiction and admissibility and the merits. By Orders of 14 March 2001 and 12 April 2001, these time-limits, taking account of the reasons given by the Congo and the agreement of the Parties, were progressively extended. The Memorial of the Congo was filed on 16 May 2001 within the time-limit thus finally prescribed.

6. By Order of 27 June 2001, the Court, on the one hand, rejected a request by Belgium for authorization, in derogation from the previous Orders of the President of the Court, to submit preliminary objections involving suspension of the proceedings on the merits and, on the other, extended the time-limit prescribed in the Order of 12 April 2001 for the filing by Belgium of a Counter-Memorial addressing both questions of jurisdiction and admissibility and the merits. The Counter-Memorial of Belgium was filed on 28 September 2001 within the time-limit thus extended.

7. Pursuant to Article 53, paragraph 2, of the Rules, the Court, after ascertaining the views of the Parties, decided that copies of the pleadings and documents annexed would be made available to the public at the opening of the oral proceedings.

8. Public hearings were held from 15 to 19 October 2001, at which the Court heard the oral arguments and replies of:

For the Congo: H.E. Mr. Jacques Masangu-a-Mwanza,
H.E. Mr. Ngele Masudi,
Maire Kosisaka Kome,
Mr. François Rigaux,
Ms Monique Chemillier-Gendreau,
Mr. Pierre d’Argent.

For Belgium: Mr. Jan Devadder,
Mr. Daniel Bethlehem,
Mr. Eric David.

9. At the hearings, Members of the Court put questions to Belgium, to which replies were given orally or in writing, in accordance with Article 61, paragraph 4, of the Rules of Court. The Court provided its written comments on the reply that was given in writing to one of these questions, pursuant to Article 72 of the Rules of Court.

10. In its Application, the Congo formulated the decision requested in the following terms:

“The Court is requested to declare that the Kingdom of Belgium shall annul the international arrest warrant issued on 11 April 2000 by a Belgian investigating judge, Mr. Vandermeersch, of the Brussels Tribunal de premières instance against the Minister for Foreign Affairs in office of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Mr. Abdelaye Yerodia Ndombasi, seeking his provisional detention pending a request for extradition to Belgium for alleged crimes constituting ‘serious violations of international humanitarian law’, that warrant having been circulated by the judge to all States, including the Democratic Republic of the Congo, which received it on 12 July 2000.”

11. In the course of the written proceedings, the following submissions were presented by the Parties:

On behalf of the Government of the Congo,

in the Memorial:

“In light of the facts and arguments set out above, the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo requests the Court to adjudge and declare that:

1. by issuing and internationally circulating the arrest warrant of 11 April 2000 against Mr. Abdelaye Yerodia Ndombasi, Belgium committed a violation in regard to the DRC of the rule of customary international law concerning the absolute inviolability and immunity from criminal process of incumbent foreign ministers;

2. no formal finding by the Court of the unlawfulness of that act constitutes an appropriate form of satisfaction, providing reparation for the consequent moral injury to the DRC;

3. the violation of international law underlying the issue and international circulation of the arrest warrant of 11 April 2000 precludes any State, including Belgium, from executing it;

4. Belgium shall be required to recall and cancel the arrest warrant of 11 April 2000 and to inform the foreign authorities to whom the warrant was circulated that, following the Court’s Judgment, Belgium renounces its request for their co-operation in executing the unlawful warrant.”

On behalf of the Government of Belgium, in the Counter-Memorial:

“For the reasons stated in Part II of this Counter-Memorial, Belgium requests the Court, as a preliminary matter, to adjudge and declare that the Court lacks jurisdiction in this case and/or that the application by the Democratic Republic of the Congo against Belgium is inadmissible.

If, contrary to the preceding submission, the Court concludes that it does have jurisdiction in this case and that the application by the Democratic Republic of the Congo is admissible, Belgium requests the Court to reject the submissions of the Democratic Republic of the Congo on the merits of the case and to dismiss the application.”

12. At the oral proceedings, the following submissions were presented by the Parties:

On behalf of the Government of the Congo,

“In light of the facts and arguments set out during the written and oral proceedings, the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo requests the Court to adjudge and declare that:

1. by issuing and internationally circulating the arrest warrant of 11 April 2000 against Mr. Abdelaye Yerodia Ndombasi, Belgium committed a violation in regard to the Democratic Republic of the Congo of the rule of customary international law concerning the absolute inviolability and immunity from criminal process of incumbent foreign ministers; in so doing, it violated the principle of sovereign equality among States;

2. no formal finding by the Court of the unlawfulness of that act constitutes an appropriate form of satisfaction, providing reparation for the consequent moral injury to the Democratic Republic of the Congo;

3. the violations of international law underlying the issue and international circulation of the arrest warrant of 11 April 2000 preclude any State, including Belgium, from executing it;

4. Belgium shall be required to recall and cancel the arrest warrant of 11 April 2000 and to inform the foreign authorities to whom the warrant was circulated that Belgium renounces its request for their cooperation in executing the unlawful warrant.”

On behalf of the Government of Belgium,

“For the reasons stated in the Counter-Memorial of Belgium and in its oral submissions, Belgium requests the Court, as a preliminary matter, to adjudge and declare that the Court lacks jurisdiction in this case and/or that the Application by the Democratic Republic of the Congo against Belgium is inadmissible.

If, contrary to the submission of Belgium with regard to the Court’s jurisdiction and the admissibility of the Application, the Court concludes that it does have jurisdiction in this case and that the Application by the Democratic Republic of the Congo is admissible, Belgium requests the Court to reject the submissions of the Democratic Republic of the Congo on the merits of the case and to dismiss the Application.”

13. On 11 April 2000 an investigating judge of the Brussels Tribunal de première instance issued “an international arrest warrant in absentia” against Mr. Abdylaye Yerodia Ndombasi, charging him, as perpetrator or co-perpetrator, with offences constituting grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions of 1949 and of the Additional Protocols thereto and with crimes against humanity.

At the time when the arrest warrant was issued Mr. Yerodia was the Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Congo.

14. The arrest warrant was transmitted to the Congo on 7 June 2000, being received by the Congolese authorities on 13 July 2000. According to Belgium, the warrant was at the same time transmitted to the International Criminal Police Organization (Interpol), an organization whose function is to enhance and facilitate cross-border criminal police co-operation worldwide; through the latter, it was circulated internationally.

15. In the arrest warrant, Mr. Yerodia is accused of having made various speeches inciting racial hatred during the month of August 1998. The crimes with which Mr. Yerodia was charged were punishable in Belgium under the Law of 16 June 1993 “concerning the Punishment of Grave Breaches of the International Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 and of Protocols 1 and II of 8 June 1977 Additional Thereto”, as amended by the Law of 10 February 1999 “concerning the Punishment of Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law” (hereinafter referred to as the “Belgian Law”).

Article 7 of the Belgian Law provides that “The Belgian courts shall have jurisdiction in respect of the offences provided for in the present Law, wheresoever they may have been committed”. In the present case, according to Belgium, the complaints that initiated the proceedings as a result of which the arrest warrant was issued emanated from 12 individuals all resident in Belgium, five of whom were of Belgian nationality. It is not contested by Belgium, however, that the alleged acts to which the arrest warrant relates were committed outside Belgian territory, that Mr. Yerodia was not a Belgian national at the time of those acts, and that Mr. Yerodia was not in Belgian territory at the time that the arrest warrant was issued and circulated. That no Belgian nationals were victims of the violence that was said to have resulted from Mr. Yerodia’s alleged offences was also uncontested.

Article 5, paragraph 3, of the Belgian Law further provides that “[i]mmunity attaching to the official capacity of a person shall not prevent the application of the present Law.”

16. At the hearings, Belgium further claimed that it offered “to entrust the case to the competent authorities of [the Congo] for enquiry and possible prosecution”, and referred to a certain number of steps which it claimed to have taken in this regard from September 2000, that is, before the filing of the Application instituting proceedings. The Congo for its part stated the following: “We have scant information concerning the form [of these Belgian proposals].” It added that: “these proposals . . . appear to have been made very belatedly, namely after an arrest warrant against Mr. Yerodia had been issued”.

17. On 17 October 2000, the Congo filed in the Registry an Application instituting the present proceedings (see paragraph 1 above), in which the Court was requested “to declare that the Kingdom of Belgium shall annul the international arrest warrant issued on 11 April 2000”. The Congo relied in its Application on two separate legal grounds. First, it claimed that “[t]he universal jurisdiction that the Belgian State attributes to itself under Article 7 of the Law in question” constituted a

“[v]iolation of the principle that a State may not exercise its authority on the territory of another State and of the principle of sovereign equality among all Members of the United Nations, as laid down in Article 2, paragraph 1, of the Charter of the United Nations”.

Secondly, it claimed that “[t]he non-recognition, on the basis of Article 5 . . . of the Belgian Law, of the immunity of a Minister for Foreign Affairs in office” constituted a “[v]iolation of the diplomatic immunity of the Minister for Foreign Affairs of a sovereign State as recognized by the jurisprudence of the Court and flowing from Article 41, paragraph 2, of the Vienna Convention of 18 April 1961 on Diplomatic Relations”.

18. On the same day that it filed its Application instituting proceedings, the Congo submitted a request to the Court for the indication of a provisional measure under Article 41 of the Statute of the Court. During the hearings devoted to consideration of that request, the Court was informed that in November 2000 a ministerial reshuffle had taken place in the Congo, following which Mr. Yerodia had ceased to hold office as Minister for Foreign Affairs and had been entrusted with the portfolio of Minister of Education. Belgium accordingly claimed that the Congo’s Application had become moot and asked the Court, as has already been recalled, to remove the case from the List. By Order of 8 December 2000, the Court rejected both Belgium’s submissions to that effect and also the Congo’s request for the indication of provisional measures (see paragraph 4 above).

19. From mid-April 2001, with the formation of a new Government in the Congo, Mr. Yerodia ceased to hold the post of Minister of Education. He no longer holds any ministerial office today.

20. On 12 September 2001, the Belgian National Central Bureau of Interpol requested the Interpol General Secretariat to issue a Red Notice in respect of Mr. Yerodia. Such notices concern individuals whose arrest is requested with a view to extradition. On 19 October 2001, at the public sittings held to hear the oral arguments of the Parties in the case, Belgium informed the Court that Interpol had responded on 27 September 2001 with a request for additional information, and that no Red Notice had yet been circulated.

21. Although the Application of the Congo originally advanced two separate legal grounds (see paragraph 17 above), the submissions of the Congo in its Memorial and the final submissions which it presented at the end of the oral proceedings refer only to a violation of its “in regard to the . . . Congo of the rule of customary international law concerning the absolute inviolability and immunity from criminal process of incumbent foreign ministers” (see paragraphs 11 and 12 above).

22. In their written pleadings, and in oral argument, the Parties addressed issues of jurisdiction and admissibility as well as the merits (see paragraphs 5 and 6 above). In this connection, Belgium raised certain objections which the Court will begin by addressing.

23. The first objection presented by Belgium reads as follows:

"That, in the light of the fact that Mr. Yerodia Ndombasi is no longer either Minister for Foreign Affairs of the [Congo] or a minister occupying any other position in the . . . Government of the Congo, there is no longer a 'legal dispute' between the Parties within the meaning of this term in the Optional Clause Declarations of the Parties and that the Court accordingly lacks jurisdiction in this case."

24. Belgium does not deny that such a legal dispute existed between the Parties at the time when the Congo filed its Application instituting proceedings, and that the Court was properly seized by that Application. However, it contends that the question is not whether a legal dispute existed at that time, but whether a legal dispute exists at the present time. Belgium refers in this respect inter alia to the Northern Cameroons case, in which the Court found that it "may pronounce judgment only in connection with concrete cases where there exists at the time of the adjudication an actual controversy involving a conflict of legal interests between the parties" (I.C.J. Reports 1963, pp. 33-34), as well as to the Nuclear Tests cases (Australia v. France)/(New Zealand v. France), in which the Court stated the following: "The Court, as a court of law, is called upon to resolve existing disputes between States . . . The dispute brought before it must therefore continue to exist at the time when the Court makes its decision" (I.C.J. Reports 1974, pp. 270-271, para. 55; p. 476, para. 58). Belgium argues that the position ofMr. Yerodia as Minister for Foreign Affairs was central to the Congo's Application instituting proceedings, and emphasizes that there has now been a change of circumstances at the very heart of the case, in view of the fact that Mr. Yerodia was relieved of his position as Minister for Foreign Affairs in November 2000 and that, since 15 April 2001, he has occupied no position in the Government of the Congo (see paragraphs 18 and 19 above). According to Belgium, while there may still be a difference of opinion between the Parties or the scope and content of international law governing the immunity of a Minister for Foreign Affairs, that difference of opinion has now become a matter of abstract, rather than of practical, concern. The result, in Belgium’s view, is that the case has become an attempt by the Congo to "[seek] an advisory opinion from the Court", and no longer a "concrete case" involving an "actual controversy" between the Parties, and that the Court accordingly lacks jurisdiction in the case.

25. The Congo rejects this objection of Belgium. It contends that there is indeed a legal dispute between the Parties, in that the Congo claims that the arrest warrant was issued in violation of the immunity of its Minister for Foreign Affairs, that that warrant was unlawful ab initio, and that this legal defect persists despite the subsequent changes in the position occupied by the individual concerned, while Belgium maintains that the issue and circulation of the arrest warrant were not contrary to international law. The Congo adds that the termination of Mr. Yerodia’s official duties in no way operated to effect the wrongful act and the injury that flowed from it, for which the Congo continues to seek redress.

26. The Court recalls that, according to its settled jurisprudence, its jurisdiction must be determined at the time that the act instituting proceedings was filed. Thus, if the Court has jurisdiction on the date the case is referred to it, it continues to do so regardless of subsequent events. Such events might lead to a finding that an application has subsequently become moot and to a decision not to proceed to judgment on the merits, but they cannot deprive the Court of jurisdiction (see Noteboom, Preliminary Objection, Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 1953, p. 122; Right of Passage over Indian Territory, Preliminary Objections, Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 1937, p. 142; Questions of Interpretation and Application of the 1971 Montreal Convention arising from the Aerial Incident at Lockerbie (Libyan Arab Jamahiriya v. United Kingdom), Preliminary Objections, Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 1998, pp. 23-24, para. 38; and Questions of Interpretation and Application of the 1971 Montreal Convention arising from the Aerial Incident at Lockerbie (Libyan Arab Jamahiriya v. United States of America), Preliminary Objections, Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 1998, p. 129, para. 37).

27. Article 36, paragraph 2, of the Statute of the Court provides:

"The States parties to the present Statute may at any time declare that they recognize as compulsory ipso facto and without special agreement, in relation to any other State accepting the same obligation, the jurisdiction of the Court in all legal disputes concerning:

(a) the interpretation of a treaty;
(b) any question of international law;
(c) the existence of any fact which, if established, would constitute a breach of an international obligation;
(d) the nature or extent of the reparation to be made for the breach of an international obligation."

On 17 October 2000, the date that the Congo’s Application instituting these proceedings was filed, each of the Parties was bound by a declaration of acceptance of compulsory jurisdiction, filed in accordance with the above provision: Belgium by a declaration of 17 June 1958 and the Congo by a declaration of 8 February 1989. Those declarations contained no reservation applicable to the present case.

Moreover, it is not contested by the Parties that at the material time there was a legal dispute between them concerning the international lawfulness of the arrest warrant of 11 April 2000 and the consequences to be drawn if the warrant was unlawful. Such a dispute was clearly a legal dispute within the meaning of the Court’s jurisprudence, namely “a disagreement on a point of law or fact, a conflict of legal views or of interests between two persons” in which “the claim of one party is positively opposed by the other” (Questions of Interpretation and Application of the 1971 Montreal Convention arising from the Aerial Incident at Lockerbie (Libyan Arab Jamahiriya v. United Kingdom), Preliminary Objections, Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 1998, p. 17, para. 22; and Questions of Interpretation and Application of the 1971 Montreal Convention arising from the Aerial Incident at Lockerbie (Libyan Arab Jamahiriya v. United States of America), Preliminary Objections, Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 1998, pp. 122-123, para. 21).

28. The Court accordingly concludes that at the time that it was seised of the case it had jurisdiction to deal with it, and that it still has such jurisdiction. Belgium’s first objection must therefore be rejected.

29. The second objection presented by Belgium is the following:

“That in the light of the fact that Mr. Yerodia Ndombasi is no longer either Minister for Foreign Affairs of the [Congo] or a minister occupying any other position in the . . . Government [of the Congo], the case is now without object and the Court should accordingly decline to proceed to judgment on the merits of the case.”

30. Belgium also relies in support of this objection on the Northern Cameroons case, in which the Court considered that it would not be a proper discharge of its duties to proceed further in a case in which any judgment that the Court might pronounce would be “without object” (I.C.J. Reports 1962, p. 38), and on the Nuclear Tests cases, in which the Court saw “no reason to allow the continuance of proceedings which it knows are bound to be fruitless” (I.C.J. Reports 1974, p. 271, para. 58; p. 477, para. 61). Belgium maintains that the declarations requested by the Congo in its first and second submissions would clearly fall within the principles enunciated by the Court in those cases, since a judgment of the Court on the merits in this case could only be directed towards the clarification of the law in this area for the future, or be designed to reinforce the position of one or other Party. It relies in support of this argument on the fact that the Congo does not allege any material injury and is not seeking compensatory damages. It adds that the issue and transmission of the arrest warrant were not predicated on the ministerial status of the person concerned, that he is no longer a minister, and that the case is accordingly now devoid of object.

31. The Congo contests this argument of Belgium, and emphasizes that the aim of the Congo — to have the disputed arrest warrant annulled and to obtain redress for the moral injury suffered — remains unachieved at the point in time when the Court is called upon to decide the dispute. According to the Congo, in order for the case to have become devoid of object during the proceedings, the cause of the violation of the right would have had to disappear, and the redress sought would have to have been obtained.

32. The Court has already affirmed on a number of occasions that events occurring subsequent to the filing of an application may render the application without object such that the Court is not called upon to give a decision thereon (see Questions of Interpretation and Application of the 1971 Mont-
35. In response, the Congo denies that there has been a substantial amendment of the terms of its Application, and insists that it has presented no new claim, whether of substance or of form, that would have transformed the subject-matter of the dispute. The Congo maintains that it has done nothing through the various stages in the proceedings but "condense and refine" its claims, as do most States that appear before the Court, and that it is simply making use of the right of parties to amend their submissions until the end of the oral proceedings.

36. The Court notes that, in accordance with settled jurisprudence, it "cannot, in principle, allow a dispute brought before it by application to be transformed by amendments in the submissions into another dispute which is different in character" (Société commerciale de Belgique, Judgment, 1939, P.C.I.J., Series A/B, No. 78, p. 173; cf. Military and Paramilitary Activities in and against Nicaragua (Nicaragua v. United States of America), Jurisdiction and Admissibility, Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 1984, p. 427, para. 80; see also Certain Phosphate Lands in Nauru (Nauru v. Australia), Preliminary Objections, Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 1992, pp. 264-267, in particular paras. 69 and 70. However, the Court considers that in the present case the facts underlying the Application have not changed in a way that produced such a transformation in the dispute brought before it. The question submitted to the Court for decision remains whether the issue and circulation of the arrest warrant by the Belgian judicial authorities against a person who was at that time the Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Congo were contrary to international law. The Congo’s final submissions arise "directly out of the question which is the subject-matter of that Application" (Fisheries Jurisdiction (Federal Republic of Germany v. Iceland), Merits, Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 1974, p. 203, para. 72; see also Temple of Preah Vihear, Merits, Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 1962, p. 36).

In these circumstances, the Court considers that Belgium cannot validly maintain that the dispute brought before the Court was transformed in a way that affected its ability to prepare its defence, or that the requirements of the sound administration of justice were infringed. Belgium’s third objection must accordingly be rejected.

37. The fourth Belgian objection reads as follows:

"That, in the light of the new circumstances concerning Mr. Yerodia Ndombasi, the case has assumed the character of an action of diplomatic protection but one in which the individual being proected has failed to exhaust local remedies, and that the Court accordingly lacks jurisdiction in the case and/or that the application is inadmissible."

38. In this respect, Belgium accepts that, when the case was first instituted, the Congo had a direct legal interest in the matter, and was asserting a claim in its own name in respect of the alleged violation by Belgium of the immunity of the Congo's Foreign Minister. However, according to Belgium, the case was radically transformed after the Application was filed, namely on 15 April 2001, when Mr. Yerodia ceased to be a member of the Congolese Government. Belgium maintains that two of the requests made of the Court in the Congo's final submissions in practice now concern the legal effect of an arrest warrant issued against a private citizen of the Congo, and that these issues fall within the remit of an action of diplomatic protection. It adds that the individual concerned has not exhausted all available remedies under Belgian law, a necessary condition before the Congo can espouse the cause of one of its nationals in international proceedings.

39. The Congo, on the other hand, denies that this is an action for diplomatic protection. It maintains that it is bringing these proceedings in the name of the Congolese State, on account of the violation of the immunity of its Minister for Foreign Affairs. The Congo further denies the availability of remedies under Belgian law. It points out in this regard that it is only when the Crown Prosecutor has become seized of the case file and makes submissions to the Chambre du conseil that the accused can defend himself before the Chambre and seek to have the charge dismissed.

40. The Court notes that the Congo has never sought to invoke before it Mr. Yerodia's personal rights. It considers that, despite the change in professional situation of Mr. Yerodia, the character of the dispute submitted to the Court by means of the Application has not changed: the dispute still concerns the lawfulness of the arrest warrant issued on 11 April 2000 against a person who was at the time Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Congo, and the question whether the rights of the Congo have or have not been violated by that warrant. As the Congo is not acting in the context of protection of one of its nationals, Belgium cannot rely upon the rules relating to the exhaustion of local remedies.

In any event, the Court recalls that an objection based on non-exhaustion of local remedies relates to the admissibility of the application (see Interhandel, Preliminary Objections, Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 1959, p. 26; Elektronica Sicula S.p.A. (ELSI), Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 1989, p. 42, para. 49). Under settled jurisprudence, the critical date for determining the admissibility of an application is the date on which it is filed (see Questions of Interpretation and Application of the 1971 Montreal Convention arising from the Aerial Incident at Lockerbie (Libyan Arab Jamahiriya v. United Kingdom), Preliminary Objections, Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 1998, pp. 25-26, paras. 43-44; and Questions of Interpretation and Application of the 1971 Montreal Convention arising from the Aerial Incident at Lockerbie (Libyan Arab Jamahiriya v. United States of America), Preliminary Objections, Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 1998, pp. 130-131, paras. 42-43). Belgium accepts that, on the date on which the Congo filed the Application instituting proceedings, the Congo had a direct legal interest in the matter, and was asserting a claim in its own name. Belgium's fourth objection must accordingly be rejected.

41. As a subsidiary argument, Belgium further contends that "[i]n the event that the Court decides that it does have jurisdiction in this case and that the application is admissible, ... the non ultra petita rule operates to limit the jurisdiction of the Court to those issues that are the subject of the [Congo]'s final submissions", Belgium points out that, while the Congo initially advanced a twofold argument, based, on the one hand, on the Belgian judge's lack of jurisdiction, and, on the other, on the immunity from jurisdiction enjoyed by its Minister for Foreign Affairs, the Congo no longer claims in its final submissions that Belgium wrongly conferred upon itself universal jurisdiction in absentia. According to Belgium, the Congo now confines itself to arguing that the arrest warrant of 11 April 2000 was unlawful because it violated the immunity from jurisdiction of its Minister for Foreign Affairs, and that the Court consequently cannot rule on the issue of universal jurisdiction in any decision it renders on the merits of the case.

42. The Congo, for its part, states that its interest in bringing these proceedings is to obtain a finding by the Court that it has been the victim of an internationally wrongful act, the question whether this case involves the "exercise of an excessive universal jurisdiction" being in this connection only a secondary consideration. The Congo asserts that any consideration by the Court of the issues of international law raised by universal jurisdiction would be undertaken not at the request of the Congo but, rather, by virtue of the defence strategy adopted by Belgium, which appears to maintain that the exercise of such jurisdiction can "represent a valid counterweight to the observance of immunities".

43. The Court would recall the well-established principle that: "it is the duty of the Court not only to reply to the questions as stated in the final submissions of the parties, but also to abstain from deciding points not included in those submissions" (Asylum, Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 1950, p. 402). While the Court is thus not entitled to decide upon questions not asked of it, the non ultra petita rule nonetheless cannot preclude the Court from addressing certain legal points in its reasoning. Thus in the present case the Court may not rule, in the operative part of its Judgment, on the question whether the disputed arrest warrant, issued by the Belgian investigating judge in exercise of his purported universal jurisdiction, complied in that regard with the rules and principles of international law governing the jurisdiction of national courts. This does not mean, however, that the Court may not deal with certain aspects of that question in the reasoning of its Judgment, should it deem this necessary or desirable.

44. The Court concludes from the foregoing that it has jurisdiction to entertain the Congo’s Application, that the Application is not without object and that accordingly the case is not moot and that the Application is admissible. Thus, the Court now turns to the merits of the case.

45. As indicated above (see paragraphs 41 to 43 above), in its Application instituting these proceedings, the Congo originally challenged the legality of the arrest warrant of 11 April 2000 on two separate grounds: on the one hand, Belgium’s claim to exercise a universal jurisdiction and, on the other, the alleged violation of the immunities of the Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Congo then in office. However, in its submissions in its Memorial, and in its final submissions at the close of the oral proceedings, the Congo invokes only the latter ground.

46. As a matter of logic, the second ground should be addressed only once there has been a determination in respect of the first, since it is only where a State has jurisdiction under international law in relation to a particular matter that there can be any question of immunities in regard to the exercise of that jurisdiction. However, in the present case, and in view of the final form of the Congo’s submissions, the Court will address first the question whether, assuming that it had jurisdiction under international law to issue and circulate the arrest warrant of 11 April 2000, Belgium in so doing violated the immunities of the then Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Congo.

47. The Congo maintains that, during his or her term of office, a Minister for Foreign Affairs of a sovereign State is entitled to inviolability and to immunity from criminal process being “absolute or complete”, that is to say, they are subject to no exception. Accordingly, the Congo contends that no criminal prosecution may be brought against a Minister for Foreign Affairs in a foreign court as long as he or she remains in office, and that any finding of criminal responsibility by a domestic court in a foreign country, or any act of investigation undertaken with a view to bringing him or her to court, would contravene the principle of immunity from jurisdiction. According to the Congo, the basis of such criminal immunity is purely functional, and immunity is accorded under customary international law simply in order to enable the foreign State representative enjoying such immunity to perform his or her functions freely and without let or hindrance. The Congo adds that the immunity thus accorded to Ministers for Foreign Affairs when in office covers all their acts, including any committed before they took office, and that it is irrelevant whether the acts done whilst in office may be characterized or not as “official acts”.

48. The Congo states further that it does not deny the existence of a principle of international criminal law, deriving from the decisions of the Nuremberg and Tokyo international military tribunals, that the accused’s official capacity at the time of the acts cannot, before any court, whether domestic or international, constitute a “ground of exemption from his criminal responsibility or a ground for mitigation of sentence”. The Congo then stresses that the fact that an immunity might bar prosecution before a specific court or over a specific period does not mean that the same prosecution cannot be brought, if appropriate, before another court which is not bound by that immunity, or at another time when the immunity need no longer be taken into account. It concludes that immunity does not mean impunity.

49. Belgium maintains for its part that, while Ministers for Foreign Affairs in office generally enjoy an immunity from jurisdiction before the courts of a foreign State, such immunity applies only to acts carried out in the course of their official functions, and cannot protect such persons in respect of private acts or when they are acting otherwise than in the performance of their official functions.

50. Belgium further states that, in the circumstances of the present case, Mr. Yerodia enjoyed no immunity at the time when he is alleged to have committed the acts of which he is accused, and that there is no evidence that he was then acting in any official capacity. It observes that the arrest warrant was issued against Mr. Yerodia personally.

51. The Court would observe at the outset that in international law it is firmly established that, as also diplomatic and consular agents, certain holders of high-ranking office in a State, such as the Head of State, Head of Government and Minister for Foreign Affairs, enjoy immunities from jurisdiction in other States, both civil and criminal. For the purposes of the present case, it is only the immunity from criminal jurisdiction and the inviolability of an incumbent Minister for Foreign Affairs that fall for the Court to consider.

52. A certain number of treaty instruments were cited by the Parties in this regard. These included, first, the Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations of 18 April 1961, which states in its preamble that the purpose of diplomatic privileges and immunities is “to ensure the efficient performance of the functions of diplomatic missions as representing States”. It provides in Article 32 that only the sending State may waive such immunity. On these points, the Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations, to which both the Congo and Belgium are parties, reflects customary international law. The same applies to the corresponding provisions of the Vienna Convention on Consular Relations of 24 April 1963, to which the Congo and Belgium are also parties.

The Congo and Belgium further cite the New York Convention on Special Missions of 8 December 1969, to which they are not, however, parties. They recall that under Article 21, paragraph 2, of that Convention:

“The Head of the Government, the Minister for Foreign Affairs and other persons of high rank, when they take part in a special mission of the sending State, shall enjoy in the receiving State or in a third State, in addition to what is granted by the present Convention, the facilities, privileges and immunities accorded by international law.”

These conventions provide useful guidance on certain aspects of the question of immunities. They do not, however, contain any provision specifically defining the immunities enjoyed by Ministers for Foreign Affairs. It is consequently on the basis of customary international law that the Court must decide the questions relating to the immunities of such Ministers raised in the present case.

53. In customary international law, the immunities accorded to Ministers for Foreign Affairs are not granted for their personal benefit, but to ensure the effective performance of their functions on behalf of their respective States. In order to determine the extent of these immunities, the Court must therefore first consider the nature of the functions exercised by a Minister for Foreign Affairs. He or she is in charge of his or her Government’s diplomatic activities and generally acts as its representative in international negotiations and intergovernmental meetings. Ambassadors and other diplomatic agents carry out their duties under his or her authority. His or her acts may bind the State represented, and there is a presumption that a Minister for Foreign Affairs, simply by virtue of that office, has full powers to act on behalf of the State (see, for example, Article 7, paragraph 2 (a), of the 1969 Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties). In the performance of these functions, he or she is frequently required to travel internationally, and thus must be in a position freely to do so whenever the need should arise. He or she must also be in constant communication with the Government, and with its diplomatic missions around the world, and be capable at any time of communicating with representatives of other States. The Court further observes that a Minister for Foreign Affairs, responsible for the conduct of his or her State’s relations with all other States, occupies a position such that, like the Head of State or the Head of Government, he or she is recognized under international law as representative of the State solely by virtue of his or her office. He or she does not have to present letters of credence; to the contrary, it is generally the Minister who determines the authority to be conferred upon diplomatic agents and countersigns their letters of credence. Finally, it is to the Minister for Foreign Affairs that chargés d’affaires are accredited.

54. The Court accordingly concludes that the functions of a Minister for Foreign Affairs are such that, throughout the duration of his or her office, he or she when abroad enjoys full immunity from criminal jurisdiction and inviolability. That immunity and that inviolability protect the individual concerned against any act of authority of another State which would hinder him or her in the performance of his or her duties.

55. In this respect, no distinction can be drawn between acts performed by a Minister for Foreign Affairs in an “official” capacity, and those claimed to have been performed in a “private” capacity, or, for that matter, between acts performed before the person concerned assumed office as Minister for Foreign Affairs and acts committed during the period of office. Thus, if a Minister for Foreign Affairs is arrested in another State on a criminal charge, he or she is clearly thereby prevented from exercising the functions of his or her office. The consequences of such impediment to the exercise of those officia functions are equally serious, regardless of whether the Minister for Foreign Affairs was, at the time of arrest, present in the territory of the arresting State or on an “official” visit or a “private” visit, regardless of whether the arrest relates to acts allegedly performed before the person became the Minister for Foreign Affairs or to acts performed while in office, and regardless of whether the arrest relates to alleged acts performed in an “official” capacity or a “private” capacity. Furthermore, even the mere risk that, by traveling to or transiting another State as a Minister for Foreign Affairs, one might be exposing himself or herself to legal proceedings could deter the Minister from travelling internationally when required to do so for the purposes of the performance of his or her official functions.

56. The Court will now address Belgium’s argument that immunities accorded to incumbent Ministers for Foreign Affairs can in no case protect them where they are suspected of having committed war crimes or crimes against humanity. In support of this position, Belgium refers to its Counter-Memorial to various legal instruments creating international criminal tribunals, to examples from national legislation, and to the jurisprudence of national and international courts.

Belgium begins by pointing out that certain provisions of the instruments creating international criminal tribunals state expressly that the official capacity of a person shall not be a bar to his exercise by such tribunals of their jurisdiction.

Belgium also places emphasis on certain decisions of national courts, and in particular on the judgments rendered on 24 March 1999 by the House of Lords in the United Kingdom and on 13 March 2001 by the Court of Cassation in France in the Pinochet and Qaddafi cases respectively, in which it contends that an exception to the immunity rule was accepted in the case of serious crimes under international law. Thus, according to Belgium, the Pinochet decision recognizes an exception to the immunity rule when Lord Millett stated that “[i]nternational law cannot be supposed to have established a crime having the character of a jus cogens and at the same time to have provided an immunity which is coextensive with the obligation it seeks to impose”, or when Lord Phillips of Worth Matrauers said that “no established rule of international law requires state immunity rations materiae to be accorded in respect of prosecution for an international crime”. As to the French Court of Cassation, Belgium contends that, in holding that, “under international law as it currently stands, the crime alleged [acts of terrorism], irrespective of its gravity, does not come within the exceptions to the principle of immunity from jurisdiction for incumbent foreign Heads of State”, the Court explicitly recognized the existence of such exceptions.

57. The Congo, for its part, states that, under international law as it currently stands, there is no basis for asserting that there is an exception to the principle of absolute immunity from criminal process of an incumbent Minister for Foreign Affairs where he or she is accused of having committed crimes under international law.

In support of this contention, the Congo refers to State practice, giving particular consideration in this regard to the Pinochet and Qaddafi cases, and concluding that such practice does not correspond to that which Belgium claims but, on the contrary, confirms the absolute nature of the immunity from criminal process of Heads of State and Ministers for Foreign Affairs. Thus, in the Pinochet case, the Congo cites Lord Browne-Wilkinson’s statement that “[t]his immunity enjoyed by a head of state in power and an ambassador in post is a complete immunity attached to the person of the head of state or ambassador and rendering him immune from all actions or prosecutions . . .”. According to the Congo, the French Court of Cassation adopted the same position in its Qaddafi judgment, in affirming that “international custom bars the prosecution of incumbent Heads of State, in the absence of any contrary international provision binding on the parties concerned, before the criminal courts of a foreign State”.

As regards the instruments creating international criminal tribunals and the latter’s jurisprudence, these, in the Congo’s view, concern only those tribunals, and no inference can be drawn from them in regard to criminal proceedings before national courts against persons enjoying immunity under international law.

58. The Court has carefully examined State practice, including national legislation and those few decisions of national higher courts, such as the House of Lords or the French Court of Cassation. It has been unable to deduce from this practice that there exists under customary international law any form of exception to the rule according immunity from criminal jurisdiction and inviolability to incumbent Ministers for Foreign Affairs, where they are suspected of having committed war crimes or crimes against humanity.

The Court has also examined the rules concerning the immunity or criminal responsibility of persons having an official capacity contained in the legal instruments creating international criminal tribunals, and which are specifically applicable to the latter (see Charter of the International Military Tribunal of Nuremberg, Art. 7; Charter of the International Military Tribunal of Tokyo, Art. 6; Statute of the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia, Art. 7, para. 2; Statute of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, Art. 6, para. 2; Statute of the International Criminal Court, Art. 27). It finds that these rules likewise do not enable it to conclude that any such an exception exists in customary international law in regard to national courts.

Finally, none of the decisions of the Nuremberg and Tokyo international military tribunals, or of the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia, cited by Belgium deal with the question of the immunities of incumbent Ministers for Foreign Affairs before national courts where they are accused of having committed war crimes or crimes against humanity. The Court accordingly notes that those decisions are in no way at variance with the findings it has reached above.

In view of the foregoing, the Court accordingly cannot accept Belgium’s argument in this regard.

59. It should further be noted that the rules governing the jurisdiction of national courts must be carefully distinguished from those governing jurisdictional immunities: jurisdiction does not imply absence of immunity, while absence of immunity does imply jurisdiction. Thus, although various international conventions or the prevention and punishment of certain serious crimes impose or States obligations of prosecution or extradition, thereby requiring them to extend their criminal jurisdiction, such extension of jurisdiction in no way affects immunities under customary international law, including those of Ministers for Foreign Affairs. These remain opposable before the courts of a foreign State, even where those courts exercise such a jurisdiction under these conventions.

60. The Court emphasizes, however, that the immunity from jurisdiction enjoyed by incumbent Ministers for Foreign Affairs does not mean that they enjoy immunity in respect of any crimes they might have commited, irrespective of their gravity. Immunity from criminal jurisdiction and individual criminal responsibility are quite separate concepts. While jurisdictional immunity is procedural in nature, criminal responsibility is a question of substantive law. Jurisdictional immunity may well bar prosecution for a certain period or for certain offences; it cannot exonerate the person to whom it applies from all criminal responsibility.

61. Accordingly, the immunities enjoyed under international law by an incumbent or former Minister for Foreign Affairs do not represent a bar to criminal prosecution in certain circumstances.

First, such persons enjoy no criminal immunity under international law in their own countries, and may thus be tried by those countries’ courts in accordance with the relevant rules of domestic law.

Secondly, they will cease to enjoy immunity from foreign jurisdiction if the State which they represent or have represented decides to waive that immunity.

Thirdly, after a person ceases to hold the office of Minister for Foreign Affairs, he or she will no longer enjoy all of the immunities accorded by international law in other States. Provided that it has jurisdiction under international law, a court of one State may try a former Minister for Foreign Affairs of another State in respect of acts committed prior or subsequent to his or her period of office, as well as in respect of acts committed during that period of office in a private capacity.

Fourthly, an incumbent or former Minister for Foreign Affairs may be subject to criminal proceedings before certain international criminal courts, where they have jurisdiction. Examples include the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia, and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, established pursuant to Security Council resolutions under Chapter VII of the United Nations Charter, and the future International Criminal Court created by the 1998 Rome Convention. The latter’s Statute expressly provides, in Article 27, paragraph 2, that “[i]mmunities or special procedural rules which may attach to the official capacity of a person, whether under national or international law, shall not bar the Court from exercising its jurisdiction over such a person”.

62. Given the conclusions it has reached above concerning the nature and scope of the rules governing the immunity from criminal jurisdiction enjoyed by incumbent Ministers for Foreign Affairs, the Court must now consider whether in the present case the issue of the arrest warrant of 11 April 2000 and its international circulation violated those rules. The Court recalls in this regard that the Congo requests it, in its first final submission, to adjudge and declare that:

11 April 2000 against Mr. Abdalaye Yerodia Ndombasi, Belgium committed a violation in regard to the Democratic Republic of the Congo of the rule of customary international law concerning the absolute inviolability and immunity from criminal process of incumbent foreign ministers; in so doing, it violated the principle of sovereign equality among States.”

63. In support of this submission, the Congo maintains that the arrest warrant of 11 April 2000 as such represents a “coercive legal act” which violates the Congo’s immunity and sovereign rights, inasmuch as it seeks to “subject an organ of domestic criminal jurisdiction a member of a foreign government who is in principle beyond its reach” and is fully enforceable without special formality in Belgium.

The Congo considers that the mere issuance of the warrant thus constituted a coercive measure taken against the person of Mr. Yerodia, even if it was not executed.

64. As regards the international circulation of the said arrest warrant, this, in the Congo’s view, not only involved further violations of the rules referred to above, but also aggravated the moral injury which it suffered as a result of the opprobrium “thus cast upon one of the most prominent members of its Government”. The Congo further argues that such circulation was a fundamental infringement of its sovereign rights in that it significantly restricted the full and free exercise, by its Minister for Foreign Affairs, of the international negotiation and representation functions entrusted to him by the Congo’s former President. In the Congo’s view, Belgium “[t]hus manifests an intention to have the individual concerned arrested at the place where he is to be found, with a view to procuring his extradition”. The Congo emphasizes moreover that it is necessary to avoid any confusion between the arguments concerning the legal effect of the arrest warrant abroad and the question of any respons-bility of the foreign authorities giving effect to it. It points out in this regard that no State has acted on the arrest warrant, and that accordingly
"no further consideration need be given to the specific responsibility which a State executing it might incur, or to the way in which that responsibility should be related" to that of the Belgian State. The Congo observes that, in such circumstances, "there would be a direct causal relationship between the arrest warrant issued in Belgium and any act of enforcement carried out elsewhere".

65. Belgium rejects the Congo’s argument on the ground that “the character of the arrest warrant of 11 April 2000 is such that it has neither infringed the sovereignty of, nor created any obligation for, the [Congo].”

With regard to the legal effects under Belgian law of the arrest warrant of 11 April 2000, Belgium contends that the clear purpose of the warrant was to procure that, if found in Belgium, Mr. Yerodia would be detained by the relevant Belgian authorities with a view to his prosecution for war crimes and crimes against humanity. According to Belgium, the Belgian investigating judge did, however, draw an explicit distinction in the warrant between, on the one hand, immunity from jurisdiction and, on the other hand, immunity from enforcement as regards representatives of foreign States who visit Belgium on the basis of an official invitation, making it clear that such persons would be immune from enforcement of an arrest warrant in Belgium. Belgium further contends that, in its effect, the disputed arrest warrant is national in character, since it requires the arrest of Mr. Yerodia if he is found in Belgium but it does not have this effect outside Belgium.

66. In respect of the legal effects of the arrest warrant outside Belgium, Belgium maintains that the warrant does not create any obligation for the authorities of any other State to arrest Mr. Yerodia in the absence of some further step by Belgium completing or validating the arrest warrant (such as a request for the provisional detention of Mr. Yerodia), or the issuing of an arrest warrant by the appropriate authorities in the State concerned following a request to do so, or the issuing of an Interpol Red Notice. Accordingly, outside Belgium, while the purpose of the warrant was admittedly “to establish a legal basis for the arrest of Mr. Yerodia . . . and his subsequent extradition to Belgium”, the warrant had no legal effect unless it was validated or completed by some prior act “requiring the arrest of Mr. Yerodia by the relevant authorities in a third State”. Belgium further argues that “[i]f a State had executed the arrest warrant, it might infringe Mr. [Yerodia’s] criminal immunity”, but that “the Party directly responsible for that infringement would have been that State and not Belgium”.

67. The Court will first recall that the “international arrest warrant in absentia”, issued on 11 April 2000 by an investigating judge of the Brussels Tribunal de première instance, is directed against Mr. Yerodia, stating that he is “currently Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, having his business address at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in Kinshasa”. The warrant states that Mr. Yerodia is charged with being “the perpetrator or co-perpetrator” of:

— Crimes under international law constituting grave breaches causing harm by act or omission to persons and property protected by the Conventions signed at Geneva on 12 August 1949 and by Additional Protocols I and II to those Conventions (Article 1, paragraph 3, of the Law of 16 June 1993, as amended by the Law of 10 February 1999 concerning the punishment of serious violations of international humanitarian law)
— Crimes against humanity (Article 1, paragraph 2, of the Law of 16 June 1993, as amended by the Law of 10 February 1999 concerning the punishment of serious violations of international humanitarian law).

The warrant refers to “various speeches inciting racial hatred” and to “particularly virulent remarks” allegedly made by Mr. Yerodia during “public addresses reported by the media” on 4 August and 27 August 1998. It adds:

“Those speeches allegedly had the effect of inciting the population to attack Tutsi residents of Kinshasa: there were dragnet searches, manhunts (the Tutsi enemy) and lynching.

The speeches inciting racial hatred thus are said to have resulted in several hundred deaths, the internment of Tutsis, summary executions, arbitrary arrests and unfair trials.”

68. The warrant further states that “the position of Ministre for Foreign Affairs currently held by the accused does not entail immunity from jurisdiction and enforcement”. The investigating judge does, however, observe in the warrant that “the rule concerning the absence of immunity under humanitarian law would appear . . . to require some qualification in respect of immunity from enforcement” and explains as follows:

“Pursuant to the general principle of fairness in judicial proceedings, immunity from enforcement must, in our view, be accorded to all State representatives welcomed as such on to the territory of Belgium (on ‘official visits’). Welcoming such foreign dignitaries as official representatives of sovereign States involves not only relations between individuals but also relations between States. This implies that such welcome includes an undertaking by the host State and its various components to refrain from taking any coercive measures against its guest and the invitation cannot become a pretext for ensnaring the individual concerned in what would then have to be labelled a trap. In the contrary case, failure to respect this undertaking could give rise to the host State's international responsibility."

69. The arrest warrant concludes with the following order:

“We instruct and order all bailiffs and agents of public authority who may be so required to execute this arrest warrant and to conduct the accused to the detention centre in Forest;

We order the warden of the prison to receive the accused and to keep him (her) in custody in the detention centre pursuant to this arrest warrant;

We require all those exercising public authority to whom this warrant shall be shown to lend all assistance in executing it.”

70. The Court notes that the issuance, as such, of the disputed arrest warrant represents an act by the Belgian judicial authorities intended to enable the arrest on Belgian territory of an incumbent Minister of Foreign Affairs on charges of war crimes and crimes against humanity. The fact that the warrant is enforceable is clearly apparent from the order given to “all bailiffs and agents of public authority . . . to execute this arrest warrant” (see paragraph 69 above) and from the assertion in the warrant that “the position of Minister for Foreign Affairs currently held by the accused does not entail immunity from jurisdiction and enforcement”. The Court notes that the warrant did admittedly make an exception for the case of an official visit by Mr. Yerodia to Belgium, and that Mr. Yerodia never suffered arrest in Belgium. The Court is bound, however, to find that, given the nature and purpose of the warrant, its mere issue violated the immunity which Mr. Yerodia enjoyed as the Congo’s incumbent Minister for Foreign Affairs. The Court accordingly concludes that the issue of the warrant constituted a violation of an obligation of Belgium towards the Congo, in that it failed to respect the immunity of that Minister and, more particularly, infringed the immunity from criminal jurisdiction and the inviolability then enjoyed by him under international law.

71. The Court also notes that Belgium admits that the purpose of the international circulation of the disputed arrest warrant was “to establish a legal basis for the arrest of Mr. Yerodia . . . abroad and his subsequent extradition to Belgium”. The Respondent maintains, however, that the enforcement of the warrant in third States was “dependent on some further preliminary steps having been taken” and that, given the "inchoate" quality of the warrant as regards third States, there was no “infringement of] the sovereignty of the [Congo]”. It further points out that no Interpol Red Notice was requested until 12 September 2001, when Mr. Yerodia no longer held ministerial office.

The Court cannot subscribe to this view. As in the case of the warrant’s issue, its international circulation from June 2000 by the Belgian authorities, given its nature and purpose, effectively infringed Mr. Yerodia’s immunity as the Congo’s incumbent Minister for Foreign Affairs and was furthermore liable to affect the Congo’s conduct of its international relations. Since Mr. Yerodia was called upon in that capacity to undertake travel in the performance of his duties, the mere international circulation of the warrant, even in the absence of “further steps” by Belgium, could have resulted, in particular, in his arrest while abroad. The Court observes in this respect that Belgium itself cites information to the effect that Mr. Yerodia, “on applying for a visa to go to two countries, [apparently] learned that he ran the risk of being arrested as a result of the arrest warrant issued against him by Belgium”, adding that “[t]his, moreover, is what the [Congo] . . . hints when it writes that the arrest warrant ‘sometimes forced Minister Yerodia to travel by roundabout routes’”. Accordingly, the Court concludes that the circulation of the warrant, whether or not it significantly interfered with Mr. Yerodia’s diplomatic activity, constituted a violation of an obligation of Belgium towards the Congo, in that it failed to respect the immunity of the incumbent Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Congo and, more particularly, infringed the immunity from criminal jurisdiction and the inviolability then enjoyed by him under international law.

72. The Court will now address the issue of the remedies sought by the Congo on account of Belgium’s violation of the above-mentioned rules of international law. In its second, third and fourth submissions, the Congo requests the Court to adjudge and declare that:

“[A] formal finding by the Court of the unlawfulness of [the issue and international circulation of the arrest warrant] constitutes an appropriate form of satisfaction, providing reparation for the consequent moral injury to the Democratic Republic of the Congo;

The violations of international law underlying the issue and international circulation of the arrest warrant of 1 April 2000 preclude any State, including Belgium, from executing it;

Belgium shall be required to recall and cancel the arrest warrant of 11 April 2000 and to inform the foreign authorities to whom the warrant was circulated that Belgium renounces its request for their co-operation in executing the unlawful warrant.”

73. In support of those submissions, the Congo asserts that the termination of the official duties of Mr. Yerodia in no way operated to effect the wrongful act and the injury flowing from it, which continue to exist. It argues that the warrant is unlawful ab initio, that “[i]t is fundamentally flawed” and that it cannot therefore have any legal effect today. It points out that the purpose of its request is reparation for the injury caused, requiring the restoration of the situation which would in all probability have existed if the said act had not been committed. It states that, inasmuch as the wrongful act consisted in an internal instrument, only the “withdrawal” and “cancellation” of the latter can provide appropriate reparation.

The Congo further emphasizes that in no way is it asking the Court itself to withdraw or cancel the warrant, nor to determine the means whereby Belgium is to comply with its decision. It explains that the withdrawal and cancellation of the warrant, by the means that Belgium deems most suitable, “are not means of enforcement of the judgment of the Court, but the requested measure of legal reparation/restitution itself.” The Congo maintains that the Court is consequently only being requested to declare that Belgium, by way of reparation for the injury to the rights of the Congo, be required to withdraw and cancel this warrant by the means of its choice.

74. Belgium for its part maintains that a finding by the Court that the immunity enjoyed by Mr. Yerodia as Minister for Foreign Affairs had been violated would in no way entail an obligation to cancel the arrest warrant. It points out that the arrest warrant is still operative and that “there is no suggestion that it presently infringes the immunity of the Congo’s Minister for Foreign Affairs”. Belgium considers that what the Congo is in reality asking of the Court in its third and fourth final submissions is that the Court should direct Belgium as to the method by which it should give effect to a judgment of the Court finding that the warrant had infringed the immunity of the Congo’s Minister for Foreign Affairs.

75. The Court has already concluded (see paragraphs 70 and 71) that the issue and circulation of the arrest warrant of 11 April 2000 by the Belgian authorities failed to respect the immunity of the incumbent Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Congo and, more particularly, infringed the immunity from criminal jurisdiction and the inviolability then enjoyed by Mr. Yerodia under international law. Those acts engaged Belgium’s international responsibility. The Court considers that the findings so reached by it constitute a form of satisfaction which will make good the moral injury complained of by the Congo.

76. However, as the Permanent Court of International Justice stated in its Judgment of 13 September 1928 in the case concerning the Factory at Chorzów:

“[t]he essential principle contained in the actual notion of an illegal act — a principle which seems to be established by international practice and in particular by the decisions of arbitral tribunals — is that reparation must, as far as possible, wipe out all the consequences of the illegal act and reestablish the situation which would, in all probability, have existed if that act had not been committed” (P.C.I.J., Series A, No. 17, p. 47).

In the present case, “the situation which would, in all probability, have existed if [the illegal act] had not been committed” cannot be re-established merely by a finding by the Court that the arrest warrant was unlawful under international law. The warrant is still extant, and remains unlawful, notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Yerodia has ceased to be Minister for Foreign Affairs. The Court accordingly considers that Belgium must, by means of its own choosing, cancel the warrant in question and so inform the authorities to whom it was circulated.

77. The Court sees no need for any further remedy: in particular, the Court cannot, in a judgment ruling on a dispute between the Congo and Belgium, indicate what that judgment’s implications might be for third States, and the Court cannot therefore accept the Congo’s submissions on this point.

I. INTRODUCTION

A. The Judgement Under Appeal

1. The Appeals Chamber of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Former Yugoslavia since 1991 (hereinafter "International Tribunal") is seized of an appeal lodged by Appellant the Defence against a judgement rendered by the Trial Chamber II on 10 August 1995. By that judgement, Appellant's motion challenging the jurisdiction of the International Tribunal was denied.

2. Before the Trial Chamber, Appellant had launched a three-pronged attack:

a) illegal foundation of the International Tribunal;
b) wrongful primacy of the International Tribunal over national courts;
c) lack of jurisdiction ratione materiae.

The judgement under appeal denied the relief sought by Appellant; in its essential provisions, it reads as follows:

"THE TRIAL CHAMBER [. . .] HEREBY DISMISSES the motion insofar as it relates to primacy jurisdiction and subject-matter jurisdiction under Articles 2, 5 and 9 and otherwise decides it to be incompetent insofar as it challenges the establishment of the International Tribunal HEREBY DENIES the relief sought by the Defence in its Motion on the Jurisdiction of the Tribunal." (Decision on the Defence Motion on Jurisdiction in the Trial Chamber of the International Tribunal, 10 August 1995 (Case No. IT-94-1-T), at 33 (hereinafter Decision at Trial).)

Appellant now alleges error of law on the part of the Trial Chamber.

3. As can readily be seen from the operative part of the judgement, the Trial Chamber took a different approach to the first ground of contestation, on which it refused to rule, from the route it followed with respect to the last two grounds, which it dismissed. This distinction ought to be observed and will be referred to below.

From the development of the proceedings, however, it now appears that the question of jurisdiction has acquired, before this Chamber, a two-tier dimension:

a) the jurisdiction of the Appeals Chamber to hear this appeal;
b) the jurisdiction of the International Tribunal to hear this case on the merits.

Before anything more is said on the merits, consideration must be given to the preliminary question: whether the Appeals Chamber is endowed with the jurisdiction to hear this appeal at all.

B. Jurisdiction Of The Appeals Chamber

As the Prosecutor of the International Tribunal has acknowledged at the hearing of 7 and 8 September 1995, the Statute is general in nature and the Security Council surely expected that it would be supplemented, where advisable, by the rules which the Judges were mandated to adopt, especially for "Trials and Appeals" (Art.15). The Judges did indeed adopt such rules: Part Seven of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence (Rules of Procedure and Evidence, 107-08 (adopted on 11 February 1994 pursuant to Article 15 of the Statute of the International Tribunal, as amended (IT/32/Rev. 5) (hereinafter Rules of Procedure)).

5. However, Rule 73 had already provided for "Preliminary Motions by Accused", including five headings. The first one is: "objections based on lack of jurisdiction." Rule 72 (B) then provides:

"The Trial Chamber shall dispose of preliminary motions in limine litis and without interlocutory appeal, save in the case of dismissal of an objection based on lack of jurisdiction." (Rules of Procedure, Rule 72 (B)).

This is easily understandable and the Prosecutor put it clearly in his argument:

"I would submit, firstly, that clearly within the four corners of the Statute the Judges must be free to comment, to supplement, to make rules not inconsistent and, to the extent I mentioned yesterday, it would also entitle the Judges to question the Statute and to assure themselves that they can do justice in the international context operating under the Statute. There is no question about that.

Rule 72 goes no further, in my submission, than providing a useful vehicle for achieving - really it is a provision which achieves justice because but for it, one could go through, as Mr. Orie mentioned in a different context, admittedly, yesterday, one could have the unfortunate position of having months of trial, of the Tribunal hearing witnesses only to find out at the appeal stage that, in fact, there should not have been a trial at all because of some lack of jurisdiction for whatever reason.

So it is really a rule of fairness for both sides in a way, but particularly in favour of the accused in order that somebody should not be put to the terrible inconvenience of having to sit through a trial which should not take place. So, it is really like many of the rules that Your Honours and your colleagues made with regard to rules of evidence and procedure. It is to an extent supplementing the Statute, but that was what it intended when the Security Council gave to the Judges the power to make rules. They did it knowing that there were spaces in the Statute that would need to be filled by having rules of procedure and evidence.

The question has, however, been put whether the three grounds relied upon by Appellant really go to the jurisdiction of the International Tribunal, in which case only, could they form the basis of an interlocutory appeal. More specifically, can the legality of the foundation of the International Tribunal and its primacy be used as the building bricks of such an appeal?

In his Brief in appeal, at page 2, the Prosecutor has argued in support of a negative answer, based on the distinction between the validity of the creation of the International Tribunal and its jurisdiction. The second aspect alone would be appealable whilst the legality and primacy of the International Tribunal could not be challenged in appeal. (Response to the Motion of the Defence on the Jurisdiction of the Tribunal before the Trial Chamber of the International Tribunal, 7 July 1995 (Case No. IT-94-1-T), at 4 (hereinafter Prosecutor Trial Brief)).

6. This narrow interpretation of the concept of jurisdiction, which has been advocated by the Prosecutor and one amicus curiae, falls foul of a modern vision of the administration of justice. Such a fundamental matter as the jurisdiction of the International Tribunal should not be kept for decision at the end of a potentially lengthy, emotional and expensive trial. All the grounds of contestation relied upon by Appellant result, in final analysis, in an assessment of the legal capability of the International Tribunal to try his case. What is this, if not in the end a question of jurisdiction? And what body is legally authorized to pass on that issue, if not the Appeals Chamber of the International Tribunal? Indeed - this is by no means conclusive, but interesting nevertheless: were not those questions to be dealt with in limine liti, they could obviously be raised on an appeal on the merits. Would the higher interest of justice be served by a decision in favour of the accused, after the latter had undergone what would then have to be branded as an unwarranted trial. After all, in a court of law, common sense ought to be honoured not only when facts are weighed, but equally when laws are surveyed and the proper rule is selected. In the present case, the jurisdiction of this Chamber to hear and dispose of Appellant’s interlocutory appeal is indisputable.

C. Grounds Of Appeal

7. The Appeals Chamber has accordingly heard the parties on all points raised in the written pleadings. It has also read the amicus curiae briefs submitted by Juristes sans Frontières and the Government of the United States of America, to whom it expresses its gratitude.

8. Appellant has submitted two successive Briefs in appeal. The second Brief was late but, in the absence of any objection by the Prosecutor, the Appeals Chamber granted the extension of time requested by Appellant under Rule 116.

The second Brief tends essentially to bolster the arguments developed by Appellant in his original Brief. They are offered under the following headings:

a) unlawful establishment of the International Tribunal;
b) unjustified primacy of the International Tribunal over competent domestic courts;
c) lack of subject-matter jurisdiction.

The Appeals Chamber proposes to examine each of the grounds of appeal in the order in which they are raised by Appellant.

II. UNLAWFUL ESTABLISHMENT OF THE INTERNATIONAL TRIBUNAL

9. The first ground of appeal attacks the validity of the establishment of the International Tribunal.

A. Meaning Of Jurisdiction

10. In discussing the Defence plea to the jurisdiction of the International Tribunal on grounds of invalidity of its establishment by the Security Council, the Trial Chamber declared:

"There are clearly enough matters of jurisdiction which are open to determination by the International Tribunal, questions of time, place and nature of an offence charged. These are properly described as jurisdictional, whereas the validity of the creation of the International Tribunal is not truly a matter of jurisdiction but rather the lawfulness of its creation [...]" (Decision at Trial, para. 4.)

There is a petitio principii underlying this affirmation and it fails to explain the criteria by which it is to be determined. The question of invalidity of the establishment of the International Tribunal raises issues which are essentially jurisdictional.

The Appeals Chamber will in the first instance examine whether the purported establishment of the International Tribunal has been done in accordance with the Security Council Resolution 827 (1993) which created the International Tribunal. Although this is not the proper forum for what is essentially a petitio principii, it is necessary to do so in order to determine whether or not the International Tribunal is lawfully established.

11. A narrow concept of jurisdiction may, perhaps, be warranted in a national context but not in international law. Under international law, because it lacks a centralized structure, does not provide for an integrated judicial system operating an orderly division of labour among a number of tribunals, where certain aspects or components of jurisdiction as a power could be centralized or vested in one of them but not the others. In international law, every tribunal is a self-contained system (unless otherwise provided). This is incompatible with a narrow concept of jurisdiction, which presupposes a certain division of labour. Of course, the constitution of an international tribunal can limit some of its jurisdictional powers, but only to the extent to which such limitation does not jeopardize its "judicial character", as shall be discussed later on. Such limitations cannot, however, be presumed and, in any case, they cannot be deduced from the concept of jurisdiction itself.

12. In sum, if the International Tribunal were not validly constituted, it would lack the legitimate power to decide in time or space over any person or subject-matter. The plea based on the invalidity of constitution of the International Tribunal goes to the very essence of jurisdiction as a power to exercise the judicial function within any ambit. It is more radical than, in the sense that it goes beyond and subsumes, all the other pleas concerning the scope of jurisdiction. This issue is a preliminary to and conditions all other aspects of jurisdiction.
B. Admissibility Of Plea Based On The Invalidity Of The Establishment Of The International Tribunal

13. Before the Trial Chamber, the Prosecutor maintained that:

(1) the International Tribunal lacks authority to review its establishment by the Security Council (Prosecutor Trial Brief, at 10-12); and that in any case
(2) the question whether the Security Council in establishing the International Tribunal complied with the United Nations Charter raises "political questions" which are "non-justiciable" (id. at 12-14).

The Trial Chamber approved this line of argument.

This position comprises two arguments: one relating to the power of the International Tribunal to consider such a plea; and another relating to the classification of the subject-matter of the plea as a "political question" and, as such, "nonjusticiable", i.e., regardless of whether or not it falls within its jurisdiction.

1. Does The International Tribunal Have Jurisdiction?

14. In its decision, the Trial Chamber declares:

"[I]t is one thing for the Security Council to have taken every care to ensure that a structure appropriate to the conduct of fair trials has been created; it is an entirely different thing in any way to infer from that careful structuring that it was intended that the International Tribunal be empowered to question the legality of the law which established it. The competence of the International Tribunal is precise and narrowly defined; as described in Article 1 of its Statute, it is to prosecute persons responsible for serious violations of international humanitarian law, subject to spatial and temporal limits, and to do so in accordance with the Statute. That is the full extent of the competence of the International Tribunal." (Decision at Trial, at para. 8.)

Both the first and the last sentences of this quotation need qualification. The first sentence assumes a subjective stance, considering that jurisdiction can be determined exclusively by reference to or inference from the intention of the Security Council, thus totally ignoring any residual powers which may derive from the requirements of the "judicial function" itself. That is also the qualification that needs to be added to the last sentence.

Indeed, the jurisdiction of the International Tribunal, which is defined in the middle sentence and described in the last sentence as "the full extent of the competence of the International Tribunal", is not, in fact, so. It is what is termed in international law "original" or "primary" and sometimes "substantive" jurisdiction. But it does not include the "incidental" or "inherent" jurisdiction which derives automatically from the exercise of the judicial function.

15. To assume that the jurisdiction of the International Tribunal is absolutely limited to what the Security Council "intended" to entrust it with, is to envisage the International Tribunal exclusively as a "subsidiary organ" of the Security Council (see United Nations Charter, Arts. 7(2) & 29), a "creation" totally fashioned to the smallest detail by its "creator" and remaining totally in its power and at its mercy. But the Security Council not only decided to establish a subsidiary organ (the only legal means available to it for setting up such a body), it also clearly intended to establish a special kind of "subsidiary organ": a tribunal.

16. In treating a similar case in its advisory opinion on the Effect of Awards of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal, the International Court of Justice declared:

"[T]he view has been put forward that the Administrative Tribunal is a subsidiary, subordinate, or secondary organ; and that, accordingly, the Tribunal's judgements cannot bind the General Assembly which established it.

The question cannot be determined on the basis of the description of the relationship between the General Assembly and the Tribunal, that is, by considering whether the Tribunal is to be regarded as a subsidiary, a subordinate, or a secondary organ, or on the basis of the fact that it was established by the General Assembly. It depends on the intention of the General Assembly in establishing the Tribunal and on the nature of the functions conferred upon it by its Statute. An examination of the language of the Statute of the Administrative Tribunal has shown that the General Assembly intended to establish a judicial body. "(Effect of Awards of Compensation July) (hereinafter Effect of Awards.)"

17. Earlier, the Court had derived the judicial nature of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal ("UNAT") from the use of certain terms and language in the Statute and its possession of certain attributes. Prominent among these attributes of the judicial function figures the power provided for in Article 2, paragraph 3, of the Statute of UNAT:

"In the event of a dispute as to whether the Tribunal has competence, the matter shall be settled by the decision of the Tribunal." (Id. at 51-2, quoting Statute of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal, art. 2, para. 3.)

18. This power, known as the principle of "Kompetenz-Kompetenz" in German or "la compétence de la compétence" in French, is part, and indeed a major part, of the incidental or inherent jurisdiction of any judicial or arbitral tribunal, consisting of its "jurisdiction to determine its own jurisdiction." It is a necessary component in the exercise of the judicial function and does not need to be expressly provided for in the constitutive documents of those tribunals, although this is often done (see, e.g., Statute of the International Court of Justice, Art. 36, para. 6). But in the words of the International Court of Justice:

"[T]his principle, which is accepted by the general international law in the matter of arbitration, assumes particular force when the international tribunal is no longer an arbitral tribunal [...] but is an institution which has been pre-established by an international instrument defining its jurisdiction and regulating its operation." (Nottebohm Case (Lisch. v. Guat.), 1953 I.C.J. Reports 7, 119 (21 March).)

This is not merely a power in the hands of the tribunal. In international law, where there is no integrated judicial system and where every judicial or arbitral organ needs a specific constitutive instrument defining its jurisdiction,
"the first obligation of the Court - as of any other judicial body - is to ascertain its own competence." (Judge Cordova, dissenting opinion, advisory opinion on Judgements of the Administrative Tribunal of the I.L.O. upon complaints made

19. It is true that this power can be limited by an express provision in the arbitration agreement or in the constitutive instruments of standing tribunals, though the latter possibility is controversial, particularly where the limitation risks undermining the judicial character or the independence of the Tribunal. But it is absolutely clear that such a limitation, to the extent to which it is admissible, cannot be inferred without an express provision allowing the waiver or the shrinking of such a well-entrenched principle of general international law.

As no such limitation text appears in the Statute of the International Tribunal, the International Tribunal can and indeed has to exercise its "competence de la compétence" and examine the jurisdictional plea of the Defence, in order to ascertain its jurisdiction to hear the case on the merits.

20. It has been argued by the Prosecutor, and held by the Trial Chamber that:

"[T]his International Tribunal is not a constitutional court set up to scrutinise the actions of organs of the United Nations. It is, on the contrary, a criminal tribunal with clearly defined powers, involving a quite specific and limited jurisdiction. If it is to confine its adjudications to those specific limits, it will have no authority to investigate the legality of its creation by the Security Council." (Decision at Trial, at para. 5; see also paras.
7, 8, 9, 17, 24, passim.)

There is no question, of course, of the International Tribunal acting as a constitutional tribunal, reviewing the acts of the other organs of the United Nations, particularly those of the Security Council, its own "creator." It was not established for that purpose, as is clear from the definition of the ambit of its "primary" or "substantive" jurisdiction in Articles 1 to 5 of its Statute.

But this is beside the point. The question before the Appeals Chamber is whether the International Tribunal, in exercising this "incidental" jurisdiction, can examine the legality of its establishment by the Security Council, solely for the purpose of ascertaining its own "primary" jurisdiction over the case before it.

The Trial Chamber has sought support for its position in some dicta of the International Court of Justice or its individual Judges, (see Decision at Trial, at paras. 10 - 13), to the effect that:

"Undoubtedly, the Court does not possess powers of judicial review or appeal in respect of decisions taken by the Security Council, as laid down in article 99 of the Charter. (International Court of Justice, 27 September 1955, at para. 89.)"

All these dicta, however, address the hypothesis of the Court exercising such judicial review as a matter of "incidental" jurisdiction. The Court has not sought to invoke such powers of review in the case before it.

The same sort of examination was undertaken by the International Court of Justice, inter alia, in its advisory opinion on the "Effect of Awards" Case:

"[T]he legal power of the General Assembly to establish a tribunal competent to render judgments binding on the United Nations and its organs is claimed by the Court. (Effect of Awards, at 56.)"

Obviously, the wider the discretion of the Security Council under the Charter of the United Nations, the narrower the field of "incidental" jurisdiction in respect of decisions taken by it.

22. In conclusion, the Appeals Chamber finds that the International Tribunal has jurisdiction to examine the plea against its jurisdiction based on the invalidity of its establishment by the Security Council.

2. Is The Question At Issue Political And As Such Non-Justiciable?

23. The Trial Chamber accepted this argument and classification. (See Decision at Trial, at para. 24.)

24. The doctrines of "political questions" and "non-justiciable disputes" are remnants of the reservations of "sovereignty", "national honour", etc. in very old arbitration treaties. They have been retained by the Vienna Convention of 1969 on the Law of Treaties (Article 29), as a means of providing for the exclusion of the International Court of Justice from the exercise of jurisdiction on the basis of a "political" or "non-justiciable" nature of the issues. The Appeals Chamber is not convinced that these doctrines have any application in the case before it.
The Security Council shall determine the existence of any threat to the peace, breach of the peace, or act of aggressión, and shall make recommendations or decide what measures shall be taken in accordance with Articles 41 and 42, to maintain or restore international peace and security. (United Nations Charter, Art. 26.)

2. The Range of Measures Envisaged Under Chapter VII

2.1. The Security Council's primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security, as well as its duty to report annually (or more frequently) to the General Assembly, underlines, as does the fact that the Security Council is the only organ of the United Nations vested with the power to act as a matter of urgency, the special importance of its role.

2.2. The Charter speaks the language of specific powers, not of absolute fiat. The Security Council does not have the power to act without a mandate from the General Assembly or the Security Council itself, Article 25,

2.3. The Security Council, under Article 27, is vested with the primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security, and it retains, under Article 29, the right to act on its own initiative on any matter which it judges to be of immediate concern to the maintenance of international peace and security.

3. The Establishment Of The International Tribunal As A Measure Under Chapter VII

3.1. Once the Security Council determines that a particular situation poses a threat to the peace or that there exists one of the situations justifying the use of the "exceptional powers" of Chapter VII, it must then determine whether the measure chosen by the Security Council to that end is consistent with Articles 41 and 42.

3.2. The Security Council has the power to establish an international criminal tribunal to try individuals for the most serious international crimes, including genocide, war crimes, and crimes against humanity, under Articles 66-69 of the United Nations Charter. This power was used for the first time following the Yugoslav-Persian Gulf War, in Resolution 827 (1993), which established the International Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia.

3.3. The Security Council has the power to impose sanctions on States that fail to comply with its resolutions, under Articles 40-42 of the United Nations Charter. These sanctions may include economic sanctions, travel bans, and other measures designed to compel compliance with the Council's resolutions.

3.4. The Security Council has the power to use military force to maintain or restore international peace and security, under Article 43 of the United Nations Charter. This power was used for the first time following the Suez crisis in 1956.

3.5. The Security Council has the power to authorize limited military intervention to prevent the threat to international peace and security, under Article 47 of the United Nations Charter. This power was used for the first time following the Gulf War in 1990.

3.6. The Security Council has the power to authorize international peacekeeping operations to maintain or restore international peace and security, under Article 48 of the United Nations Charter. This power was used for the first time following the Korean War in 1950.

3.7. The Security Council has the power to authorize international assistance to States that are unable to maintain or restore international peace and security, under Article 49 of the United Nations Charter. This power was used for the first time following the economic embargo against Cuba in 1962.

3.8. The Security Council has the power to use diplomatic, economic, and other measures to prevent the threat to international peace and security, under Article 50 of the United Nations Charter. This power was used for the first time following the Cuban Missile Crisis in 1962.

3.9. The Security Council has the power to use international assistance to States that are unable to maintain or restore international peace and security, under Article 51 of the United Nations Charter. This power was used for the first time following the oil embargo against Iran in 1979.

3.10. The Security Council has the power to use international assistance to States that are unable to maintain or restore international peace and security, under Article 52 of the United Nations Charter. This power was used for the first time following the economic sanctions against Iraq in 1990.

3.11. The Security Council has the power to use international assistance to States that are unable to maintain or restore international peace and security, under Article 53 of the United Nations Charter. This power was used for the first time following the economic sanctions against Cuba in 1992.

3.12. The Security Council has the power to use international assistance to States that are unable to maintain or restore international peace and security, under Article 54 of the United Nations Charter. This power was used for the first time following the economic sanctions against Iran in 1995.

3.13. The Security Council has the power to use international assistance to States that are unable to maintain or restore international peace and security, under Article 55 of the United Nations Charter. This power was used for the first time following the economic sanctions against Iraq in 1996.

3.14. The Security Council has the power to use international assistance to States that are unable to maintain or restore international peace and security, under Article 56 of the United Nations Charter. This power was used for the first time following the economic sanctions against Cuba in 1997.

3.15. The Security Council has the power to use international assistance to States that are unable to maintain or restore international peace and security, under Article 57 of the United Nations Charter. This power was used for the first time following the economic sanctions against Iran in 1998.

3.16. The Security Council has the power to use international assistance to States that are unable to maintain or restore international peace and security, under Article 58 of the United Nations Charter. This power was used for the first time following the economic sanctions against Iraq in 1999.

3.17. The Security Council has the power to use international assistance to States that are unable to maintain or restore international peace and security, under Article 59 of the United Nations Charter. This power was used for the first time following the economic sanctions against Cuba in 2000.

3.18. The Security Council has the power to use international assistance to States that are unable to maintain or restore international peace and security, under Article 60 of the United Nations Charter. This power was used for the first time following the economic sanctions against Iran in 2001.

3.19. The Security Council has the power to use international assistance to States that are unable to maintain or restore international peace and security, under Article 61 of the United Nations Charter. This power was used for the first time following the economic sanctions against Iraq in 2002.

3.20. The Security Council has the power to use international assistance to States that are unable to maintain or restore international peace and security, under Article 62 of the United Nations Charter. This power was used for the first time following the economic sanctions against Cuba in 2003.

3.21. The Security Council has the power to use international assistance to States that are unable to maintain or restore international peace and security, under Article 63 of the United Nations Charter. This power was used for the first time following the economic sanctions against Iran in 2004.

3.22. The Security Council has the power to use international assistance to States that are unable to maintain or restore international peace and security, under Article 64 of the United Nations Charter. This power was used for the first time following the economic sanctions against Iraq in 2005.
Chapter, and more particularly in Articles 41 and 42 which detail these measures: the general prescription which can accommodate both institutional and Member State action. The second phrase can be read as referring particularly to one species of this very large category of measures referred to in the first phrase, i.e., the measures involving the use of armed force, to the species mentioned in the second phrase rather than the "genus" referred to in the first phrase of this sentence.

b) that the Security Council is constitutionally or inherently incapable of creating a judicial organ, as it is conceived in the Charter as an executive organ, hence not possessed of judicial powers which can be exercised through a subsidiary organ;

c) Prima facie it is clear that the establishment of a war crimes tribunal was not intended. The examples mentioned in this article focus upon economic and political measures and do not in any way suggest judicial measures. (Brief to Support the... before the... Chamber, 23 June 1995 (Case No. IT-94-1-T), at para. 3.2.1.)

33. The establishment of an international criminal tribunal is not expressly mentioned among the enforcement measures provided for in Chapter VII, and more particularly in Articles 41 and 42.

34. Prima facie, the International Tribunal matches perfectly the description in Article 41 of "measures not involving the use of armed force." Appellant, however, has argued both before the Trial Chamber and this Appeals Chamber, that:

35. The Security Council may decide what measures not involving the use of armed force are to be employed to bring about the objectives of Chapter VII. It is evident that the measures set out in Article 41 are merely illustrative examples which obviously do not exclude other measures. All the Article requires is that they do not involve the "use of force." It is a negative definition.

36. Logically, if the Organisation can undertake measures which can be implemented directly through the Organization's own or its Members', it can if need be complemented by measures which it can implement directly, vis-à-vis its Members, but it is of the essence of "collective measures" that they are collectively undertaken. Action by Member States on their own behalf in a specific sector in the second phrase, rather than with "these measures" referred to in the first phrase of this sentence.

37. The Security Council is not a judicial organ, and is not provided with judicial powers (though it may incidentally perform quasi-judicial activities such as effecting determinations or findings). The function of the Security Council exists beyond decision-making and enforcement powers, in the discharge of which the Security Council exercises decision-making and international peace and security, in the discharge of which the Security Council exercises decision-making and enforcement powers. The Security Council does not have jurisdiction to hear cases and it cannot establish a subsidiary organ possessed of such powers as a complement to its decisions, nor is it empowered to act in this manner which means that it is not an organ of the United Nations equipped with such powers. Nor does it mean, in other words, that the Security Council has delegated to it some of its own functions or the exercise of some of its own powers. Nor does it mean that the Security Council has delegated to the International Criminal Tribunal the exercise of its own principal function of maintenance of peace and security, i.e., as a measure contributing to the restoration and maintenance of international peace and security, as demonstrated by the current situation in the former Yugoslavia.

38. The argument that the Security Council, not being endowed with judicial powers, cannot establish a subsidiary organ possessed of such powers is untenable: it results from a fundamental misunderstanding of the constitutional set-up of the Charter.

39. The third argument is directed against the discretionary power of the Security Council in evaluating the appropriateness of the chosen measure and its effectiveness in achieving its objectives, the restoration and maintenance of international peace.

40. It is evident that the measures set out in Article 41 are merely illustrative examples which obviously do not exclude other measures. All the Article requires is that they do not involve the "use of force." It is a negative definition.
4. Was The Establishment Of The International Tribunal Contrary To The General Principle Whereby Courts Must Be "Established By Law"?

41. Appellant challenges the establishment of the International Tribunal by contending that it has not been established by law made by the Security Council. As we have seen, the establishment of international tribunals approved by the Security Council is regulated by Chapter VII of the United Nations Charter. In this connection, the Security Council established the International Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia by Resolution 824 (1993) (see United Nations Security Council, Res. 824 (1993), and G.A. Res. 59/289 (1994)).

42. For the reasons outlined below, Appellant has not satisfied this Chamber that the requirements laid down in these conventions must apply only to a court established by law. Article 6(1) of the European Convention on Human Rights, which states: "In the determination of any criminal charge against him, or of his rights and obligations in a suit at law, every person is entitled to a fair and public hearing by a competent, independent and impartial tribunal established by law."

According to Appellant, however, there must be something more for a tribunal to be "established by law." Appellant takes the position that, given the differences between the United Nations system and national systems of justice, an international court established under Chapter VII of the United Nations Charter is not a "tribunal established by law." Appellant argues that the right to have a criminal charge determined by a tribunal established by law is one which forms part of the "general principle affirmed by the European Court of Human Rights in the cases of Golder v. United Kingdom, App. No. 8054/78, 8055/78, 8056/78, 8057/78 & 8058/78 (Joined) 37 Eur. Doc. Rep. 352 (1981)."

Appellant maintains that the International Tribunal is not a "tribunal established by law" and therefore did not enjoy the protection of Article 6(1) of the European Convention on Human Rights. As Appellant argues, the right to a fair and public hearing by a competent, independent and impartial tribunal established by law is also the right of the individual "to have at his disposal a body which, though not a Parliament, has a limited power to take binding decisions."

In our view, one such body is the Security Council when, acting under Chapter VII of the United Nations Charter, it makes decisions binding by virtue of Article 25 of the United Nations Charter.

In addition, the establishment of the International Tribunal has been repeatedly approved and endorsed by the Security Council: see United Nations Security Council, Res. 824 (1993) and G.A. Res. 59/289 (1994). For these reasons, the Security Council has not failed to establish the International Tribunal. The International Tribunal has been lawfully established under Chapter VII of the United Nations Charter.

43. Indeed, there are three possible interpretations of the term "established by law." First, as Appellant argues, "established by law" could mean established by a legislature. Appellant claims that the International Tribunal is the product of a "mere executive order" and not of a "decision making process under democratic control." Appellant submits that the International Tribunal is not "established by law" because it is not "established by law" as understood by the Security Council.

Second, the Security Council established the International Tribunal on 30 April 1993, by Resolution 824 (1993). The Security Council is a permanent international body established under the United Nations Charter and it is a "tribunal established by law." The Security Council is not a "tribunal established by law" as understood by the Security Council. Therefore, the International Tribunal is not "established by law" because it is not "established by law" as understood by the Security Council.

Third, the Security Council established the International Tribunal on 30 April 1993, by Resolution 824 (1993). The Security Council is a permanent international body established under the United Nations Charter and it is a "tribunal established by law." The Security Council is not a "tribunal established by law" as understood by the Security Council. Therefore, the International Tribunal is not "established by law" because it is not "established by law" as understood by the Security Council.

44. A second possible interpretation is that the words "established by law" refer to establishment of international courts established by a body of the Security Council as opposed to a body of the United Nations. Appellant argues that the International Tribunal is not "established by law" because it is not "established by law" as understood by the Security Council.

45. The third possible interpretation of the requirement that the International Tribunal be "established by law" is that its establishment must be in accordance with the rule of law. This appears to be the most sensible and most likely meaning of the phrase "established by law." The rule of law is the principle that law is the basis of governmental action. The rule of law is the principle that law is the basis of governmental action. The rule of law is the principle that law is the basis of governmental action. The rule of law is the principle that law is the basis of governmental action.
This interpretation of the requirement that a tribunal be "established by law" is borne out by an analysis of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. As noted by the Trial Chamber, at the time Article 14 of the Covenant on Civil and Political Rights was drafted, it was suggested that the International Military Tribunal at Nuremberg was established by law because it was not "pre-established by law". In relevant part, Appellant's motion alleges: "The International Tribunal, established in accordance with the present Statute and the Rules of Procedure of the International Tribunal, was established in accordance with the present Statute and the Rules of Procedure of the International Tribunal." (Emphasis added.)

As noted by the Trial Chamber in its Decision, there is wide agreement that, in most respects, the International Court of Justice satisfies the requirement for a court to be "established by law". The Court has been established in accordance with the United Nations Charter, which provides: "The International Court of Justice shall have jurisdiction in any case referred to it by the United Nations Security Council or the General Assembly or in any case by a group of States, in accordance with its rules of procedure." (United Nations Charter, art. 92.) The Court has been established in accordance with the United Nations Charter, which provides: "The International Court of Justice shall have jurisdiction in any case referred to it by the United Nations Security Council or the General Assembly or in any case by a group of States, in accordance with its rules of procedure." (United Nations Charter, art. 92.)

The Court has been established in accordance with the United Nations Charter, which provides: "The International Court of Justice shall have jurisdiction in any case referred to it by the United Nations Security Council or the General Assembly or in any case by a group of States, in accordance with its rules of procedure." (United Nations Charter, art. 92.)

In conclusion, the Appeals Chamber finds that the International Court of Justice satisfies the requirement that it be "established by law." It is thus "established by law."
the Counsel for Duško Tadić, that the said Duško Tadić is the subject of an investigation instituted by the national courts of the Federal Republic of Germany in respect of the matters listed in paragraph 2 hereof."

(Decision of the Trial Chamber on the Application by the Prosecutor for a Formal Request for Deferral to the Competence of the International Tribunal in the Matter of Duško Tadić, 8 November 1994 (Case No. IT-94-1-D), at 8 (Emphasis added.).)

There is a distinct difference between an investigation and a trial. The argument of Appellant, based erroneously on the existence of an actual trial in Germany, cannot be heard in support of his challenge to jurisdiction when the matter has not yet passed the stage of investigation.

But there is more to it. Appellant insists repeatedly (see Defence Appeal Brief, at paras. 7.2 & 7.4) on impartial and independent proceedings diligently pursued and not designed to shield the accused from international criminal responsibility. One recognises at once that this vocabulary is borrowed from Article 10, paragraph 2, of the Statute. This provision has nothing to do with the present case. This is not an instance of an accused being tried anew by this International Tribunal, under the exceptional circumstances described in Article 10 of the Statute. Actually, the proceedings against Appellant were deferred to the International Tribunal on the strength of Article 9 of the Statute which provides that a request for deferral may be made "at any stage of the procedure" (Statute of the International Tribunal, art. 9, para. 2). The Prosecutor has never sought to bring Appellant before the International Tribunal for a new trial for the reason that one or the other of the conditions enumerated in Article 10 would have vitiated his trial in Germany. Deferral of the proceedings against Appellant was requested in accordance with the procedure set down in Rule 9 (iii):

"What is in issue is closely related to, or otherwise involves, significant factual or legal questions which may have implications for investigations or prosecutions before the Tribunal [...]" (Rules of Procedure, Rule 9 (iii.).)

After the Trial Chamber had found that that condition was satisfied, the request for deferral followed automatically. The conditions alleged by Appellant in his Brief were irrelevant.

Once this approach is rectified, Appellant's contentions lose all merit.

53. As pointed out above, however, three specific arguments were advanced before the Trial Chamber, which are clearly referred to in Appellant's Brief in appeal. It would not be advisable to leave this ground of appeal based on primacy without giving those questions the consideration they deserve.

The Chamber now proposes to examine those three points in the order in which they have been raised by Appellant.

A. Domestic Jurisdiction

54. Appellant argued in first instance that:

"From the moment Bosnia-Herzegovina was recognised as an independent state, it had the competence to establish jurisdiction to try crimes that have been committed on its territory." (Defence Trial Brief, at para. 5.)

Appellant added that:

"As a matter of fact the state of Bosnia-Herzegovina does exercise its jurisdiction, not only in matters of ordinary criminal law, but also in matters of alleged violations of crimes against humanity, as for example is the case with the prosecution of Mr Karadzic et al."(Id. at para. 5.2.)

This first point is not contested and the Prosecutor has conceded as much. But it does not, by itself, settle the question of the primacy of the International Tribunal. Appellant also seems so to realise. Appellant therefore explores the matter further and raises the question of State sovereignty.

B. Sovereignty Of States

55. Article 2 of the United Nations Charter provides in paragraph 1: "The Organization is based on the principle of the sovereign equality of all its Members."

In Appellant's view, no State can assume jurisdiction to prosecute crimes committed on the territory of another State, barring a universal interest "justified by a treaty or customary international law or an opinio juris on the issue." (Decision of the Trial Chamber on the Application by the Prosecutor for a Formal Request for Deferral to the Competence of the International Tribunal in the Matter of Duško Tadić, 8 November 1994 (Case No. IT-94-1-D), at 8 (Emphasis added.).)

Based on this proposition, Appellant argues that the same requirements should underpin the establishment of an international tribunal destined to invade an area essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of States. In the present instance, the principle of State sovereignty would have been violated. The Trial Chamber has rejected this plea, holding among other reasons:

"In any event, the accused not being a State lacks the locus standi to raise the issue of primacy, which involves a plea that the sovereignty of a State has been violated, a plea only a sovereign State may raise or waive and a right clearly the accused cannot take over from the State." (Decision at Trial, para. 41.)

The Trial Chamber relied on the judgement of the District Court of Jerusalem in Israel v. Eichmann:

"The right to plead violation of the sovereignty of a State is the exclusive right of that State. Only a sovereign State may raise the plea or waive it, and the accused has no right to take over the rights of that State." (36 International Law Reports 5, 62 (1961), affirmed by Supreme Court of Israel, 36 International Law Reports 277 (1962.).)

Consistently with a long line of cases, a similar principle was upheld more recently in the United States of America in the matter of United States v. Noriega:

"As a general principle of international law, individuals have no standing to challenge violations of international treaties in the absence of a protest by the sovereign involved." (746 F. Supp. 1506, 1533 (S.D. Fla. 1990.).)

Authoritative as they may be, those pronouncements do not carry, in the field of international law, the weight which they may bring to bear upon national judiciaries. Dating back to a period when sovereignty stood as a sacrosanct and unassailable attribute of statehood, this concept recently has suffered progressive erosion at the hands of the more liberal forces at work in the democratic societies, particularly in the field of human rights.

Whatever the situation in domestic litigation, the traditional doctrine upheld and acted upon by the Trial Chamber is not reconcilable, in this International Tribunal, with the view that an accused, being entitled to a full defence, cannot be deprived of a plea so intimately connected with, and grounded in, international law as a defence based on violation of State sovereignty. To bar an accused from raising such a plea is tantamount to deciding that, in this day and age, an international court could not, in a criminal matter where the liberty of an accused is at stake, examine a plea raising the issue of violation of State sovereignty. Such a startling conclusion would imply a contradiction in terms which this Chamber feels it is its duty to refute and lay to rest.

56. That Appellant be recognised the right to plead State sovereignty does not mean, of course, that his plea must be favourably received. He has to discharge successfully the test of the burden of demonstration. Appellant's plea faces several obstacles, each of which may be fatal, as the Trial Chamber has actually determined.

Appellant can call in aid Article 2, paragraph 7, of the United Nations Charter: "Nothing contained in the present Charter shall authorize the United Nations to intervene in matters which are essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of any State [...]" However, one should not forget the commanding restriction at the end of the same paragraph: "but this principle shall not prejudice the application of enforcement measures under Chapter VII." (United Nations Charter, art 2., para. 7.)

Those are precisely the provisions under which the International Tribunal has been established. Even without these provisions, matters can be taken out of the jurisdiction of a State. In the present case, the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina not only has not contested the jurisdiction of the International Tribunal but has actually approved, and collaborated with, the International Tribunal, as witnessed by:

b) Decree with Force of Law on Deferral upon Request by the International Tribunal 12 Official Gazette of the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina 317 (10 April 1995) (translation);

c) Letter from Vasvija Vidovic, Liaison Officer of the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina, to the International Tribunal (4 July 1995).

As to the Federal Republic of Germany, its cooperation with the International Tribunal is public and has been previously noted.

The Trial Chamber was therefore fully justified to write, on this particular issue:

"[I]t is pertinent to note that the challenge to the primacy of the International Tribunal has been made against the express intent of the two States most closely affected by the indictment against the accused - Bosnia and Herzegovina and Germany. The former, on the one hand, is the State of the accused and the latter, on the other hand, is the State whose laws are to be applied. In both States, the International Tribunal has been established in accordance with the terms and conditions of the Statute and Rules of Procedure of the International Tribunal.

The principle of primacy of this International Tribunal over national courts must be affirmed; the more so since it is confined within the strict limits of Articles 9 and 10 of the Statute and Rules 9 and 10 of the Rules of Procedure of the International Tribunal.

The Trial Chamber was fully justified in writing:

"Before leaving this question relating to the violation of the sovereignty of States, it should be noted that the crimes which the International Tribunal has been established to try are not crimes of a purely domestic nature. They involve the perpetration of an international crime which all the nations of the world are interested in preventing. (Decision at Trial, at para. 42.)"

60. The plea of State sovereignty must therefore be dismissed.

C. Jus De Non Evocando

Appellant argues that he has a right to be tried by his national courts under his national laws. No one has questioned that right. The problem is elsewhere: is that right exclusive? Does it prevent Appellant from being tried before an international tribunal?

Before the Trial Chamber, the Prosecutor responded with alternative arguments that: (a) the conflicts in the former Yugoslavia should be characterized as an international armed conflict; and (b) even if the conflicts were characterized as internal, the International Tribunal has jurisdiction under Articles 3 and 5 to adjudicate crimes committed in the context of an armed conflict, regardless of the nature of the conflict, and that it need not determine whether the conflict is international or international at all.

Appellant contends that such an exclusive right has received universal acceptance: yet one cannot find it expressed in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights or in the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. The Trial Chamber denied Appellant's motion, concluding that the notion of internal armed conflict was not a jurisdictional criterion of Article 2 and that Articles 3 and 5 each apply to both internal and international armed conflicts. Appellant did not involve armed conflict through movements of troops or arms, or any other activity that would indicate a breach of the laws or practices of armed conflict.

In support of this stand, Appellant has quoted seven national Constitutions (Article 17 of the Constitution of the Netherlands, Article 101 of the Constitution of Germany (unified), Article 13 of the Constitution of Belgium, Article 25 of the Constitution of the Federal Republic of Germany, Article 22 of the Constitution of France, Article 30 of the Constitution of Japan, and Article 31 of the Constitution of South Africa) that contain provisions similar in substance, requiring that no person be removed from his or her "natural judge" established by law, save with his consent. The other constitutional provisions cited are either similar in substance, requiring only that no person be removed from the jurisdiction of the courts set up under the laws of his country, or are irrelevant to Appellant's argument.

Appellant points out that the existence of an armed conflict is determined by the factual and legal circumstances of each case. The Trial Chamber agreed that the International Tribunal had jurisdiction over the case because the conflicts in the former Yugoslavia were international in character, and that the notion of international armed conflict was not a jurisdictional criterion of Article 2.

Art. 13 No person may be withdrawn from the judge assigned to him by the law, save with his consent. In support of this stand, Appellant has quoted seven national Constitutions (Article 17 of the Constitution of the Netherlands, Article 101 of the Constitution of Germany (unified), Article 13 of the Constitution of Belgium, Article 25 of the Constitution of the Federal Republic of Germany, Article 22 of the Constitution of France, Article 30 of the Constitution of Japan, and Article 31 of the Constitution of South Africa) that contain provisions similar in substance, requiring that no person be removed from his or her "natural judge" established by law, save with his consent. A Preliminary Issue: The Existence Of An Armed Conflict

International humanitarian law governs the conduct of both internal and international armed conflicts. Appellant contends that such an exclusive right has received universal acceptance: yet one cannot find it expressed in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights or in the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. The Trial Chamber agreed that the notion of international armed conflict was not a jurisdictional criterion of Article 2.
Liberal Interpretation Of The Statute

1. Literal Interpretation Of The Statute

71. On the face of it, some provisions of the Statute are unclear as to whether they apply to offences occurring in situations of internal armed conflicts or international armed conflicts. The Appeals Chamber notes, however, that a number of provisions are applicable to both situations of internal and international armed conflicts. Article 3, paragraph 1, for example, provides that the Statute applies to all persons affected by an armed conflict. The same provision specifies in paragraph 2 that the persons who have been deprived of their liberty or whose liberty has been restricted for reasons related to such a conflict shall enjoy the protection of Articles 5 and 6 until the end of such deprivation or restriction.

2. Teleological Interpretation Of The Statute

72. In adopting resolution 827, the Security Council established the International Tribunal with the stated purpose of achieving a just and durable peace and security in the region. The Statute was adopted to achieve this purpose without reference to whether the conflicts in the former Yugoslavia were internal or international. As the members of the Security Council well knew, in 1991, when the Statute was drafted, the conflicts in the former Yugoslavia could have been characterized as both internal and international, or alternatively, as an internationalised conflict. The conflict in the former Yugoslavia had been conducted internationally by the involvement of foreign countries, and the conflict in the former Yugoslavia had been conducted internationally by the involvement of foreign countries, and some of the parties had been affiliated with such countries. The conflict in the former Yugoslavia had been conducted internationally by the involvement of foreign countries, and the conflict in the former Yugoslavia had been conducted internationally by the involvement of foreign countries, and some of the parties had been affiliated with such countries. The conflict in the former Yugoslavia had been conducted internationally by the involvement of foreign countries, and the conflict in the former Yugoslavia had been conducted internationally by the involvement of foreign countries, and some of the parties had been affiliated with such countries.

73. The varying nature of the conflicts is evidenced by the agreements reached by various parties to abide by certain rules of humanitarian law. Reflecting the international aspects of the conflicts, on 27 November 1991 representatives of the Governments of the Republic of Serbia and Montenegro and of the Republic of Croatia signed an agreement in Geneva providing for the protection of civilians and the wounded and for the exchange of information. By contrast, an agreement reached on 22 May 1992 between the parties to the conflict in the former Yugoslavia reflects the internal aspects of the conflicts. The agreement was based on common Article 3 of the Geneva Conventions which generally applies to both internal and international armed conflicts.
Karadzic (President of the Serbian Democratic Party), and Mr. Miljenko Brkic (President of the Croatian Democratic Community) committed the parties to abide by the substantive rules of internal armed conflict contained in common Article 2 of the 1949 Geneva Conventions concerning international conflicts. (Agreement No. 1, 22 May 1992, art. 2, paras. 1-6 (hereinafter Agreement No. 1).) Clearly, this Agreement shows that the parties concerned regarded the armed conflicts in which they were involved as international but, in view of their magnitude, they agreed to extend to them the application of a number of rules applicable to international armed conflicts. In other words, the parties agreed to extend the rules of internal armed conflict to the armed conflicts in their territory. It is therefore evident that, had the ICRC not believed that the conflicts governed by the agreement at issue were internal, it would have acted blatantly contrary to a common provision of the four Geneva Conventions (Article 6/6/6/7). This is a provision formally banning any agreement designed to transform an international armed conflict into an internal armed conflict. It is thus evident that the ICRC regarded the conflicts governed by the agreement in question as internal.

In each of its successive resolutions, the Security Council focused on the practices with which it was concerned, and not, as the ICTY judges argue, on the classification of the conflict as international or internal. An analysis of the Security Council's many statements leading up to the establishment of the ICTY reveals that the majority of the parties concerned regarded the armed conflicts in which they were involved as international but, in view of their magnitude, they agreed to extend to them the application of a number of rules applicable to international armed conflicts. The Security Council's many statements leading up to the establishment of the ICTY reflect an awareness of the mixed character of the conflicts. On the one hand, prior to创建 the International Tribunal, the Security Council adopted a number of resolutions concerning the situation in the former Yugoslavia (S.C. Res. 771 (13 August 1992), S.C. Res. 787 (18 November 1992), S.C. Res. 797 (10 December 1992), S.C. Res. 808 (8 March 1993), S.C. Res. 810 (8 March 1993)). On the other hand, the International Tribunal, in its turn, focused on the practices with which it was concerned, and the determinative practice was the resolution of the Security Council on which the ICTY was anchored, even if the Security Council had already included in resolutions 771 and 797, relating to the conflict in the former Yugoslavia, as internal conflicts. In other words, the statement of the security authorities was based on the assumption that the conflict was international, that the Bosnian Serbs are not a rebellious entity, but as organs or agents of the governments and the military forces of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and the Republika Srpska, they would be considered as international criminal entities. On the contrary, the ICTY's practice reveals that the parties concerned regarded the armed conflicts in which they were involved as international but, in view of their magnitude, they agreed to extend to them the application of a number of rules applicable to international armed conflicts.

In each of its successive resolutions, the Security Council focused on the practices with which it was concerned, and not, as the ICTY judges argue, on the classification of the conflict as international or internal. An analysis of the Security Council's many statements leading up to the establishment of the ICTY reveals that the majority of the parties concerned regarded the armed conflicts in which they were involved as international but, in view of their magnitude, they agreed to extend to them the application of a number of rules applicable to international armed conflicts.
Thus, the Security Council's object in enacting the Statute - to prosecute and punish persons responsible for certain condemned acts being committed in a conflict understood to contain both internal and international aspects - suggests that the jurisdiction of the International Tribunal should extend to both internal and international armed conflicts.

3. Logical And Systematic Interpretation Of The Statute

(a) Article 2

79. Article 2 of the Statute of the International Tribunal provides:

"The International Tribunal shall have the power to prosecute persons committing or ordering to be committed grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949, namely the following acts against persons or property protected under the provisions of the relevant Geneva Convention:

(a) wilful killing;
(b) torture or inhuman treatment, including biological experiments;
(c) wilfully causing great suffering or serious injury to body, health;
(d) wilfully causing the loss of or serious damage to, or wiltfully destroying or intentionally rendering useless, the following:

- fixed economic, cultural, scientific, educational, religious or historical property;
- movable property, the destruction or wilful rendering useless of which is not justified by military necessity and carried out unlawfully and wantonly;
- prisoner of war or a civilian,

(e) compelling a prisoner of war or a civilian to serve in the forces of a hostile power;
(f) wilfully depriving a prisoner of the means of subsistence or health-care;
(g) wilfully depriving a prisoner of the right to trial;
(h) unlawful deportation or transfer or unlawful confinement of a civilian;
(i) taking civilians as hostages."

By its explicit terms, and as confirmed in the Report of the Secretary-General, Article 2 is effective to incorporate into the Statute certain provisions of the Geneva Conventions relating to "grave breaches" of the Geneva Conventions of 1949, and, more specifically, the provisions of those Conventions relating to grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions of 1949. Each of the four Geneva Conventions contains a grave breaches provision, which is put to a distinct but related purpose, and is applicable in the context of an international armed conflict. For the purposes of the International Tribunal, the Conventions provide:

- a set of criteria to identify the status of a conflict as international or international armed conflict, or as internal armed conflict;
- a set of criteria to identify the status of a conflict as internal or international armed conflict, or as internal armed conflict;
- a set of criteria to identify the status of a conflict as international or international armed conflict, or as internal armed conflict;
- a set of criteria to identify the status of a conflict as international or international armed conflict, or as internal armed conflict.

Thus, the Security Council's purpose in creating the International Tribunal was to prosecute and punish persons responsible for certain condemned acts being committed in a conflict understood to contain both internal and international aspects - at least not the mandatory universal jurisdiction involved in the grave breaches system.

80. With all due respect, the Trial Chamber is right in implying that the enforcement mechanism has of course not been imported into the Statute of the International Tribunal. The grave breaches system of the Geneva Conventions establishes a world-wide armed conflict. The international armed conflict element generally attaches to the grave breaches provisions of the Geneva Conventions, in a sense that the gravest of breaches are committed in the context of an international armed conflict. The international armed conflict element generally attaches to the grave breaches provisions of the Geneva Conventions, in a sense that the gravest of breaches are committed in the context of an international armed conflict. The international armed conflict element generally attaches to the grave breaches provisions of the Geneva Conventions, in a sense that the gravest of breaches are committed in the context of an international armed conflict. The international armed conflict element generally attaches to the grave breaches provisions of the Geneva Conventions, in a sense that the gravest of breaches are committed in the context of an international armed conflict.
The above interpretation is borne out by what could be considered as part of the preparatory works of the Statute of the International Tribunal, namely the Report of the Secretary-General. There, in introducing and explaining the Novembrine Tribunal, the interpreter, while the international armed conflict, the Report of the Secretary-General, it lacks jurisdiction under Article 3 to adjudicate alleged violations of the former Yugoslav legal order. Article 3 is mostly

We find that our interpretation of Article 2 is the only one warranted by the text of the Statute and the relevant provisions of the Geneva Conventions, as well as by the understanding of the parties. The interpretation of Article 3 shows that (i) it refers to a broad category of offenses, namely, all violations of international humanitarian law, and (ii) the examination of some of those violations provided in Article 3 is not exhaustive.

To identify the content of the class of offenses falling under Article 3, Article 3 should be drawn to an important fact of practice. The international armed conflicts, to the extent that they are now more correctly termed international humanitarian law and that the so-called "Hague Regulations," as a part of the international law of armed conflict, have been incorporated into the Geneva Conventions and Additional Protocols I and II. As the Geneva Conventions were clearly concluded within a framework of an international armed conflict (see above, para. 73), it may be taken as an important indication of the present state of development of the "grave breaches," system applicable in the context of international armed conflicts.

Notwithstanding the foregoing, the Appeals Chamber must conclude that, in the present state of development of the law of armed conflict, the "grave breaches," system is not exhaustive of all violations of international humanitarian law.

Before the Trial Chamber, the Prosecutor asserted an alternative argument whereby the provisions on grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions could be applied to internal conflicts on the strength of some agreements entered into by the conflicting parties. For the reasons stated above, in Section IV C (para. 144), we find it unnecessary to resolve this issue at this time.

(i) The interpretation of Article 3 shows that (i) it refers to a broad category of offenses, namely, all violations of international humanitarian law, and (ii) the examination of some of those violations provided in Article 3 is not exhaustive.
88. That Article 3 does not confine itself to covering violations of Hague law, but is intended also to refer to all violations of international humanitarian law (subject to the limitations just stated), is borne out by the debates in the Security Council that followed the adoption of the resolution establishing the International Tribunal. As mentioned above, three Member States of the Council, namely France, the United States and the United Kingdom, expressly stated that Article 3 of the Statute also covers obligations stemming from agreements in force between the conflicting parties, that is Article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions and the two Additional Protocols, as well as other agreements entered into by the conflicting parties. The French delegate stated that:

"[T]he expression 'laws or customs of war' used in Article 3 of the Statute covers specifically, in the opinion of France, all the obligations that flow from the humanitarian law agreements in force on the territory of the former Yugoslavia at the time when the offences were committed." (Provisional Verbatim Record of the 327th Meeting, at 11, U.N. Doc. S/PV.3217 (25 May 1993)).

The American delegate stated the following:

"[W]e understand that other members of the Council share our view regarding the following clarifications related to the Statute:

Firstly, it is understood that the 'laws or customs of war' referred to in Article 3 include all obligations under humanitarian law agreements in force in the territory of the former Yugoslavia at the time the acts were committed, including common article 3 of the 1949 Geneva Conventions, and the 1977 Additional Protocols to these Conventions." (Id., at p. 19.)

The British delegate stated:

"[I]t would be our view that the reference to the laws or customs of war in Article 3 is broad enough to include applicable international conventions." (Id., at p. 19.)

It should be added that the representative of Hungary stressed:

"the importance of the fact that the jurisdiction of the International Tribunal covers the whole range of international humanitarian law and the entire duration of the conflict throughout the territory of the former Yugoslavia." (Id., at p. 20.)

Since no delegate contested these declarations, they can be regarded as providing an authoritative interpretation of Article 3 to the effect that its scope is much broader than the enumerated violations of Hague law.

89. In light of the above remarks, it can be held that Article 3 is a general clause covering all violations of humanitarian law not falling under Article 2 or covered by Articles 4 or 5, more specifically: (i) violations of the Hague law on international conflicts; (ii) infringements of provisions of the Geneva Conventions other than those classified as "grave breaches" by those Conventions; (iii) violations of common Article 3 and other customary rules on internal conflicts; (iv) violations of agreements binding upon the parties to the conflict, considered qua treaty law, i.e., agreements which have not turned into customary international law (on this point see below, para. 143).

90. The Appeals Chamber would like to add that, in interpreting the meaning and purport of the expressions "violations of the laws or customs of war" or "violations of international humanitarian law", one must take account of the context of the Statute as a whole. A systematic construction of the Statute emphasises the fact that various provisions, in spelling out the purpose and tasks of the International Tribunal or in defining its functions, refer to "serious violations" of international humanitarian law. (See Statute of the International Tribunal, Preamble, arts. 1, 9(1), 10(1)- (2), 23(1), 29(1) (Emphasis added.).) It is therefore appropriate to take the expression "violations of the laws or customs of war" to cover serious violations of international humanitarian law.

91. Article 3 thus confers on the International Tribunal jurisdiction over any serious offence against international humanitarian law not covered by Article 2, 4 or 5. Article 3 is a fundamental provision laying down that any "serious violation of international humanitarian law" must be prosecuted by the International Tribunal. In other words, Article 3 functions as a residual clause designed to ensure that no serious violation of international humanitarian law is taken away from the jurisdiction of the International Tribunal. Article 3 aims to make such jurisdiction watertight and inescapable.

92. This construction of Article 3 is also corroborated by the object and purpose of the provision. When it decided to establish the International Tribunal, the Security Council did so to put an end to all serious violations of international humanitarian law occurring in the former Yugoslavia and not only special classes of them, namely "grave breaches" of the Geneva Conventions or violations of the "Hague law." Thus, if correctly interpreted, Article 3 fully realizes the primary purpose of the establishment of the International Tribunal, that is, not to leave unpunished any person guilty of any such serious violation, whatever the context within which it may have been committed.

93. The above interpretation is further confirmed if Article 3 is viewed in its more general perspective, that is to say, is appraised in its historical context. As the International Court of Justice stated in the Nicaragua case, Article 1 of the four Geneva Conventions, whereby the contracting parties "undertake to respect and ensure respect for the Conventions "in all circumstances", has become a "general principle [...] of humanitarian law to which the Conventions merely give specific expression." (Case Concerning Military and Paramilitary Activities in and Against Nicaragua (Nicar. v. U.S.) (Merits), 1986 I.C.J. Reports 14, at para. 220 (27 June) (hereinafter Nicaragua Case). This general principle lays down an obligation that is incumbent, not only on States, but also on other international entities including the United Nations. It was with this obligation in mind that, in 1977, the States drafting the two Additional Protocols to the Geneva Conventions agreed upon Article 89 of Protocol I, whereby:

"In situations of serious violations of the Conventions or of this Protocol, the High Contracting Parties undertake to act, jointly or individually, in co-operation with the United Nations and in conformity with the United Nations Charter." (Protocol I, at art. 89 (Emphasis added.).)

Article 3 is intended to realise that undertaking by endowing the International Tribunal with the power to prosecute all serious violations of international humanitarian law.

(ii) The Conditions That Must Be Fulfilled For A Violation Of International Humanitarian Law To Be Subject To Article 3

94. The Appeals Chamber deems it fitting to specify the conditions to be fulfilled for Article 3 to become applicable. The following requirements must be met for an offence to be subject to prosecution before the International Tribunal under Article 3:

(i) the violation must constitute an infringement of a rule of international humanitarian law;

(ii) the rule must be customary in nature or, if it belongs to treaty law, the required conditions must be met (see below, para. 143);

(iii) the violation must be "serious", that is to say, it must constitute a breach of a rule protecting important values, and the breach must involve grave consequences for the victim. Thus, for instance, the fact of a combatant simply appropriating a loaf of bread in an occupied village would not amount to a "serious violation of international humanitarian law" although it may be regarded as falling foul of the basic principle laid down in Article 46, paragraph 1, of the Hague Regulations (and the corresponding rule of customary international law) whereby "private property must be respected" by any army occupying an enemy territory;

(iv) the violation of the rule must entail, under customary or conventional law, the individual criminal responsibility of the person breaching the rule.

It follows that it does not matter whether the "serious violation" has occurred within the context of an international or an internal armed conflict, as long as the requirements set out above are met.

95. The Appeals Chamber deems it necessary to consider now two of the requirements set out above, namely: (i) the existence of customary international rules governing internal strife and (ii) the question of whether the violation of such rules may entail individual criminal responsibility. The Appeals Chamber focuses on these two requirements because it is easier, if not impossible, to pin down the actual behavior of the various non-governmental armed forces involved in the situation.

(iii) Customary Rules of International Humanitarian Law Governing Internal Armed Conflicts

a. General

96. Whenever armed violence erupted in the international community, in traditional international law the legal response was based on a stark dichotomy: belligerency or insurgency. The former category applied to armed conflicts between sovereign States more inclined to look after their own interests than community concerns or humanitarian demands.

97. Since the 1930s, however, the aforementioned distinction has gradually become more and more blurred, and international legal rules have increasingly emerged or been agreed upon to regulate internal armed conflict. The nature of these conflicts has been gradually superseded by a human-being-oriented approach. Gradually the maxim of Roman law hominum causa omne jus constitutum est (all law is created for the benefit of human beings) has gained a firm foothold in the international community as well. It follows that in the area of armed conflict the rules of customary international law and the customary international humanitarian law must primarily be placed on such elements as official pronouncements of States, military manuals, and judicial decisions.

b. Principal Rules

100. The first rules that evolved in this area were aimed at protecting the civilian population from the hostilities. As a result, the first section of the 1950 Geneva Conventions (Article 84) and the 1949 Geneva Conventions (Article 3) to which we shall refer below, have been supplemented by a number of other rules and principles. The Appeals Chamber here exposes some of the most important principles and rules of customary law that have emerged in the international community for the purpose of guiding the armed violence.

As a practical measure, the Congolese Government suggests that international Red Cross observers come to armed conflicts, the ICRC has promoted the application of humanitarian law. In addition, whenever possible, it has endeavoured to persuade the conflicting parties to abide by the basic principles of humanitarian law. These efforts have contributed to the gradual acceptance of the principles of humanitarian law by the contending parties in both international and internal armed conflicts. The ICRC has also been active in promoting the respect for humanitarian law through its publication of the Code of Conduct for Field Personnel and its involvement in international conferences on humanitarian law. The ICRC has consistently emphasized that military operations should comply with the principles of humanitarian law, and has actively contributed to the enforcement of these principles by its presence on the ground.

The application of certain rules of war in both internal and international armed conflicts is corroborated by two General Assembly resolutions on "Respect of Human Rights in Armed Conflict." The first one, resolution 2444, was adopted to affirm the principles of customary international law as a basis for the protection of civilians in armed conflict. The second resolution, 2675, was adopted to reaffirm the principles laid down in resolution 2444 and to ensure their full application. These resolutions emphasize the importance of protecting civilians and maintaining their dignity and security in armed conflicts.

The accession to the Additional Protocols to the Geneva Conventions of 1949 has been a significant step in the implementation of humanitarian law. The Protocols provide additional rules and protections for civilians and combatants in armed conflicts, and their adherence by States is essential for the enforcement of humanitarian law. The ICRC has played a significant role in promoting the adoption and implementation of these protocols, and continues to work towards their full implementation.

The ICRC also plays a crucial role in the development of new humanitarian law. By its advocacy and engagement in international forums, the ICRC contributes to the elaboration of new rules and principles, ensuring that humanitarian law evolves in response to emerging challenges.

In conclusion, the ICRC has been a pivotal player in the promotion and enforcement of humanitarian law in armed conflicts. Through its advocacy, publication of guidelines, and active involvement on the ground, the ICRC has contributed significantly to the protection of civilians and the maintenance of human dignity in armed conflicts. The continued efforts of the ICRC are essential for the sustenance of humanitarian law and for the protection of civilians in armed conflicts.
Report of the Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities

“It deplores the serious violations of human rights and international humanitarian law which are still occurring on its Forty-sixth Session, in Chechnya. It calls on the authorities of the Russian Federation to undertake immediate and effective measures to put an end to the gross and massive violations of human rights and international humanitarian law taking place in the two republics of Chechnya.

118. That at present there exist general principles governing the conduct of hostilities (the so-called Hague law). For instance, the German Military Manual of 1922 provides that:

119. The fundamental concepts which underlie the Hague law are of particular importance, especially in the light of the current international situation. They must therefore be given due consideration and applied to the conduct of hostilities in the current conflict.

120. This fundamental concept has brought about the gradual formation of general rules concerning specific weapons, such as chemical weapons. The use of chemical weapons in the Iraq-Iran war has been widely condemned by the international community.

121. A firm position to the same effect was taken by the British authorities: in 1988 the Foreign Office stated that the use of chemical weapons in the Iraq-Iran war is inhumane, and consequently proscribed, in international wars, cannot but be inhumane and inadmissible in civil strife.

122. A clear position on the matter was also taken by the United States Government. In a "press guidance" statement issued by the State Department on 9 September 1988 it was stated that:

On 13 September 1988, Secretary of State George Schultz, in a hearing before the United States Senate Judiciary Committee, strongly condemned as "completely unacceptable" the use of chemical weapons by Iraq. (Hearing on International Law Concerning Chemical and Biological Weapons, Appellant’s Brief (October 1988).) On 24 September, Mr. R.W. Murphy, Assistant Secretary for Near Eastern Affairs of the Department of State, expressed the same view and called the chemical weapons use "illegal." (See Department of State Bulletin (December 1988), at 43.)

It is interesting to note that, reportedly, the Iraqi Government "flatly denied the poison gas charges." (New York Times, 16 September 1988, at A 11.) Furthermore, it agreed to respect and abide by the relevant international norms on chemical weapons. In the aforementioned statement, Ambassador Murphy said:

On the contrary, the United States, in its statement of 20 September 1988, reiterated its position that the chemical weapons use was illegal and that Iraq had committed a serious breach of international law. (See United States, Department of State, Press Guidance (30 September 1988).)

126. It is interesting to note that, reportedly, the Iraqi Government "flatly denied the poison gas charges." (New York Times, 16 September 1988, at A 11.) Furthermore, it agreed to respect and abide by the relevant international norms on chemical weapons. In the aforementioned statement, Ambassador Murphy said:

127. The emergence of the aforementioned general rules on internal armed conflicts does not imply that internal strife is regulated by general international law in all its aspects. Two particular limitations may be noted: (i) only a limited set of crimes against humanity is prohibited in internal armed conflicts, as identified in the 1994 Manual on Ethical Standards for Military Operations and Law Enforcement. (ii) The use of specific means of warfare is not prohibited in internal armed conflicts, nor is the use of particular methods of conducting hostilities. (iii) The use of weapons specifically designed for warfare purposes is not prohibited in internal armed conflicts, nor is the use of particular methods of conducting hostilities. (iv) The use of weapons specifically designed for warfare purposes is not prohibited in internal armed conflicts, nor is the use of particular methods of conducting hostilities.

128. Even if customary international law includes certain basic principles applicable to both internal and international armed conflicts, Appellant argues that such prohibitions do not apply to the conduct of hostilities in internal armed conflicts. Appellant contends that these provisions cannot therefore be considered to be "law applicable to both types of conflict." (Appellant’s Brief (October 1988), at 71.) However, it is clear that many of the provisions of the 1977 Additional Protocols to the Geneva Conventions are also applicable to internal armed conflicts. (See, e.g., Appellant’s Reply Brief (October 1988), at 41.)

129. Applying the foregoing criteria to the violations at issue here, we have no doubt that they entail individual criminal responsibility under customary international law. As the Nuremberg Tribunal concluded:

"Trials of war criminals before military tribunals will, we earnestly believe, contribute alike to justice and to peace. For it is only by the sternest justice that a nation can hope to secure the grace of lenity." (Trials of War Criminals Before Military Tribunals, Vol. I, p. 387 (1952).)

130. Furthermore, many elements of international practice show that States intend to criminalize serious breaches of customary rules and principles on internal conflicts. As mentioned above, during the Nigerian Civil War, both members of the Federal Army and Boko Haram were held before Nigerian courts and tried for violations of principles of international humanitarian law. (See paras. 106 and 125.)

131. Breaches of Common Article 3 are clearly and beyond any doubt, regarded as punishable by the military or civil authorities. (See, e.g., Gen. Sir Richard F. W. Wilson, The Law of War in Internal Armed Conflict (1984), at 163.) Furthermore, many elements of international practice show that States intend to criminalize serious breaches of customary rules and principles on internal conflicts. As mentioned above, during the Nigerian Civil War, both members of the Federal Army and Boko Haram were held before Nigerian courts and tried for violations of principles of international humanitarian law. (See paras. 106 and 125.)

132. No doubt that the use of chemical weapons in war is prohibited under international law. (See, e.g., Appellant’s Brief (October 1988), at 46.) Furthermore, in a press conference on 20 September 1988, the State Department spokesman Mr. P. Robert Murphy said:

"On the contrary, the United States, in its statement of 20 September 1988, reiterated its position that the chemical weapons use was illegal and that Iraq had committed a serious breach of international law. (See United States, Department of State, Press Guidance (30 September 1988).)"

127. Notwithstanding these limitations, it cannot be denied that customary rules have developed in the context of internal armed conflicts. These rules, as specifically identified in the preceding discussion, cover such areas as protection of civilians, protection of prisoners of war, protection of the civilian population, and the conduct of hostilities. (See, e.g., Appellant’s Brief (October 1988), at 71.)

128. Even if customary international law includes certain basic principles applicable to both internal and international armed conflicts, Appellant argues that such prohibitions do not apply to the conduct of hostilities in internal armed conflicts. Appellant contends that these provisions cannot therefore be considered to be "law applicable to both types of conflict." (Appellant’s Brief (October 1988), at 71.) However, it is clear that many of the provisions of the 1977 Additional Protocols to the Geneva Conventions are also applicable to internal armed conflicts. ---

Questions have been raised as to whether the prohibition in the 1925 Geneva Protocol against (chemical weapons) use in war applies to (chemical weapons) use in internal conflicts. However, it is clear that such use is prohibited under international law. (See, e.g., Appellant’s Brief (October 1988), at 46.) Furthermore, in a press conference on 20 September 1988, the State Department spokesman Mr. P. Robert Murphy said:

Article 5

138. Article 5 of the Statute lays down the jurisdiction of the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia over crimes against humanity. It provides:

(a) murder;
(b) extermination;
(c) enslavement;
(d) deportation;
(e) imprisonment;
(f) torture;
(g) rape;
(h) other inhumane acts.

139. The Tribunal is also empowered to try offenses committed by or against any person in the territories of States Parties to the Statute.
to those acts committed "in the execution of or in connection with any crime against peace or any war crime." He argued that this limitation persists in contemporary international law and constitutes a requirement that crimes against humanity be committed in the context of an international armed conflict (which assertedly was missing in the instant case). According to Council for Defence, jurisdiction under Article 5 over crimes against humanity "committed in armed conflict, whether international or internal in character" constitutes an ex post facto law violating the principle of nullum crimen sine lege. Although before the Appeals Chamber the Appellant has forgone this argument (see Appeal Transcript, 8 September 1995, at 45), in view of the importance of the matter this Chamber deems it fitting to comment briefly on the scope of Article 5.

140. As the Prosecutor observed before the Trial Chamber, the nexus between crimes against humanity and either crimes against peace or war crimes, required by the Nuremberg Charter, was peculiar to the jurisdiction of the Nuremberg Tribunal. Although the nexus requirement in the Nuremberg Charter was carried over to the 1948 General Assembly resolution affirming the Nuremberg principles, there is no logical or legal basis for this requirement and it has been abandoned in subsequent State practice with respect to crimes against humanity. Most notably, the nexus requirement was eliminated from the definition of crimes against humanity contained in Article III(e) of Control Council Law No. 10 of 20 December 1945. (Control Council Law No. 10, Control Council for Germany, Official Gazette, 31 January 1946, at p. 50). The obsolescence of the nexus requirement is evidenced by international conventions regarding genocide and apartheid, both of which prohibit particular types of crimes against humanity regardless of any connection to armed conflict. (Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, 9 December 1948, art. 2, 78 U.N.T.S. 277; Article 1 (providing that genocide, "whether committed in time of peace or in time of war, is a crime under international law"); International Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid, 30 November 1973, 1015 U.N.T.S. 243, arts. 1-2). Article 5(1).

141. It is by now a settled rule of customary international law that crimes against humanity do not require a connection to international armed conflict. Indeed, as the Prosecutor points out, customary international law may not require a connection between crimes against humanity and any conflict at all. Thus, by requiring that crimes against humanity be committed in either internal or international armed conflict, the Security Council may have defined the crime in Article 5 more narrowly than necessary under customary international law. There is no question, however, that the definition of crimes against humanity adopted by the Security Council in Article 5 comports with the principle of nullum crimen sine lege. Article 5(1).

142. We conclude, therefore, that Article 5 may be invoked as a basis of jurisdiction over crimes committed in either internal or international armed conflicts. In addition, for the reasons stated above, in Section IV A, (paras. 66-70), we conclude that in this case there was an armed conflict. Therefore, the Appellant's challenge to the jurisdiction of the International Tribunal under Article 5 must be dismissed.

C. May The International Tribunal Also Apply International Agreements Binding Upon The Conflicting Parties?

143. Before both the Trial Chamber and the Appeals Chamber, Defence and Prosecution have argued the application of certain agreements entered into by the conflicting parties. It is therefore fitting for this Chamber to pronounce on this. It should be emphasised again that the only reason behind the stated purpose of the drafters that the International Tribunal should apply customary international law was to avoid violating the principle of nullum crimen sine lege in the event that a party to the conflict did not adhere to a specific treaty. (Report of the Secretary-General, at para. 34.) It follows that the International Tribunal is authorised to apply, in addition to customary international law, any treaty which: (i) was unquestionably binding on the parties at the time of the alleged offense; and (ii) was not in conflict with or derogating from peremptory norms of international law, as are most customary rules of international humanitarian law. This analysis of the jurisdiction of the International Tribunal is borne out by the statements made in the Security Council at the time the Statute was adopted. As already mentioned above (paras. 75 and 88), representatives of the United States, the United Kingdom and France all agreed that Article 3 of the Statute did not exclude application of international agreements binding on the parties. (Provisional Verbatim Record, of the U.N.SCOR, 3217th Meeting., at 11, 15, 19, U.N. Doc. S/PV.3217 (25 May 1993)). Article 5(1).

144. We conclude that, in general, such agreements fall within our jurisdiction under Article 3 of the Statute. As the defendant in this case has not been charged with any violations of any specific agreement, we find it unnecessary to determine whether any specific agreement gives the International Tribunal jurisdiction over the alleged crimes.

145. For the reasons stated above, the third ground of appeal, based on lack of subject-matter jurisdiction, must be dismissed.

International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda

Prosecutor v. Jean-Paul Akayesu
Judgement of 2 September 1998 (summary)

Case No. ICTR-96-4-T
Jean-Paul Akayesu was arrested in Zambia on 10 October 1995. On 16 February 1996, Judge William Sekule confirmed the Indictment submitted by the Prosecutor against Jean-Paul Akayesu. In all, the said Indictment covers 13 counts relating to genocide, crimes against humanity and violations of Article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions of 1949 and of Additional Protocol I of 1977.

At the time he confirmed the Indictment, Judge William Sekule also issued a warrant of arrest, accompanied by an order for the continued detention of the Accused. Pursuant to a request from the Prosecutor made on 26 May 1996, the Accused was detained at the Detention Facility of the Tribunal.

After rendering its findings on the acts with which Akayesu is charged and the applicable law, the Chamber is of the opinion that it would be appropriate, for a better understanding of the events alleged in the Indictment, to briefly summarise the history of the pre-colonial period up to 1994, reviewing the colonial period and the “Revolution” of 1959 by Grégoire Kayibanda. The Chamber most particularly highlighted the military and political conflict between the Rwandan Armed Forces (RAF) and the Rwandan Patriotic Front from 1987, culminating in the military intervention of the United Nations peacekeepers on 31 July 1994.

Jean-Paul Akayesu made his initial appearance before this Chamber on 30 May 1996. At that time, he pleaded not guilty to each of the counts charged. The trial on the merits opened on 9 January 1997. During the trial, the Chamber heard forty-two witnesses called by the parties. The proceedings generated more than 4000 pages of transcripts and 125 documents entered in evidence.
In the opinion of the Chamber, this demonstrates the resolve of the perpetrators of these massacres not to spare any Tutsi. Their plan called for doing whatever was possible to prevent any Tutsi from escaping and, thus, to destroy the whole group. Dr. Alison DesForges stated that in the 1994 conflict, the refugees from Rwanda took refuge into the River Nyabarongo, a tributary of the Nile, as explained in several photographs shown in court throughout the trial. She explained that the intent in that gesture was "to send the Tutsi back to their origin," in accordance with the notion that the Tutsi are a foreign group in Rwanda, believed to have come from the Nilotic regions.

The Chamber then considered whether the events that took place between April and July 1994, as the act of committing certain crimes, including the killing of members of the group or causing serious physical or mental harm to members of the group, as such.

14. Even though the number of victims is yet to be known with accuracy, no one can deny that the genocide was carried out with great brutality. The testimony of many witnesses and experts, includingMajor-General Dallaire, who appeared before the Chamber, showed that the perpetrators of the genocide were not only members of the group, but also included individuals belonging to other ethnic, racial or religious groups, as such.

15. Consequently, in view of these widespread killings, the victims of which were mainly Tutsi, the Chamber concludes from all the evidence that the genocide charged was indeed the act of committing certain crimes, including the killing of members of the group or causing serious physical or mental harm to members of the group, as such.

16. In the opinion of the Chamber, many facts show that the intention of the perpetrators of the genocide was to cause the complete disappearance of the Tutsi people. In this connection, Alison DesForges, a specialist historian of Rwanda, who prepared the stenographic reports for the trial, stated that the Tutsi were blamed for all the misery that befell the country, Dr. Zachariah, who appeared as an expert witness before the Chamber, described the piles of bodies he saw everywhere, on the roads, on the footpaths and in rivers and, particularly, the manner in which all these people had been killed. He saw identity cards, on which the ethnic group was mentioned, made it possible to separate the Hutu from the Tutsi, with the latter being systematically killed. Other witnesses, such as Simon Cox, a British cameraman, who appeared before the Chamber, described the piles of bodies he saw everywhere, on the roads, on the footpaths and in rivers, and in particular, the manner in which all these people had been killed. He saw identity cards, on which the ethnic group was mentioned, and in particular, the manner in which all these people had been killed.

17. Other testimonies heard, especially that of Major-General Dallaire, also show that there was an intention to wipe out the Tutsi group in its entirety, since even newborn babies were not spared. Many testimonies given before the Chamber in the sense that the conflict with the RPF, genocide was committed in Rwanda in 1994 against the Tutsi as a group. The execution of this genocide was probably facilitated by the conflict, in the sense that the conflict with the RPF served as a pretext for the propaganda inciting genocide against the Tutsi, by branding RPF fighters and Tutsi civilians together as "foreign." In this respect, Dr. Alison DesForges testified before the Chamber that the systematic execution of the Tutsi was carried out by the RPF, particularly at the beginning of the conflict, in the belief that the Tutsi were responsible for the conflict with the RPF. The Chamber is of the opinion that the genocide appeared to have been meticulously organized. In fact, Dr. Alison DesForges testified before the Chamber that the genocide was probably facilitated by the conflict, in the sense that the conflict with the RPF served as a pretext for the propaganda inciting genocide against the Tutsi, by branding RPF fighters and Tutsi civilians together as "foreign." In this respect, Dr. Zachariah mentioned the case of a hospital commanders, where the body of one was kept as a "Tutsi" and the other as a "Hutu."

18. Numerous testimonies showed that the massacre of the Tutsi was planned. In this respect, Dr. Alison DesForges stated that she had heard that the Tutsi were to be killed systematically. Other testimonies, such as that of the Accused himself, unambiguously stated that the Tutsi were to be killed systematically.

19. The Chamber concludes that the intention of the perpetrators of the genocide was to cause the complete disappearance of the Tutsi people. In particular, the evidence submitted to the Chamber, it is clear that the massacres which occurred in Rwanda in 1994 had a specific objective, namely the extermination of the Tutsi, who were targeted especially by the Tutsi children and pregnant women. However, the Chamber is of the opinion that the genocide was committed in accordance with the notion of the genocide, in accordance with the notion of the genocide, by branding RPF fighters and Tutsi civilians together as "foreign." In this respect, Dr. Alison DesForges mentioned the case of a hospital commanders, where the body of one was kept as a "Tutsi" and the other as a "Hutu."
21. The Chamber finds that the genocide was organized and planned not only by members of the RPF, but also by the political forces who were behind the Hutu-power. The Chamber finds that for each of the events described in paragraphs 12 to 23 of the Indictment, the Chamber is convinced beyond a reasonable doubt of the following:

22. The Chamber holds that the genocide was organized and planned not only by members of the RPF, but also by the political forces who were behind the Hutu-power, that it was executed essentially by civilians including the armed militia and even ordinary citizens, and above all, that the majority of the Tutsi victims were non-combatants.

23. The Chamber then turned to the question of assessment of evidence. The evidence produced by the parties in the case was highly voluminous. The Chamber found it difficult to interpret the credibility of the witnesses and to determine the impact of the events that happened in Taba commune in 1994. The Chamber considered that most of the witnesses directly experienced the events that they were narrating, and that such trauma could have an impact on their testimonies. The Chamber also took into account the difficulties in interpreting the statements made by the witnesses, most of whom spoke in Kinyarwanda, and the difficulties in communicating with the witnesses. The Chamber found that the witnesses were invaluable to the Tribunal in its search for the truth on the events that happened in Taba commune in 1994.

24. The Chamber then ruled on the admissibility of some evidence. It concluded, in accordance with the Statute and Rules of Procedure and Evidence, that the evidence which was presented by the parties was admissible. The Chamber noted that when only one testimony is presented on a fact, it is not bound to apply the adage Unus Testis, Nullus Testis, and that such evidence should be considered with caution. The Chamber also found that the hearsay evidence is not admissible per se, but that such evidence should be considered with caution.

25. The Chamber then ruled on the admissibility of the facts alleged in paragraphs 14 and 15 of the Indictment. It concluded, in accordance with the Statute and Rules of Procedure and Evidence, that the facts alleged in paragraphs 14 and 15 of the Indictment were admissible. The Chamber noted that when only one testimony is presented on a fact, it is not bound to apply the adage Unus Testis, Nullus Testis, and that such evidence should be considered with caution.
The Chamber finds that the acts alleged in paragraph 21 have been proven. It has been established that on or about 20 April 1994, Akayesu, who was armed at the time of his arrest, went to the house of the victim W, the wife of Niyinkamungu, the teacher. During the search, the accused forced her to open the door to the house. When she refused, the accused shot her several times in the chest. The victim died while being taken to hospital. The Chamber finds that the acts alleged in paragraph 22 have also been proven. It has been established that on or about 19 April 1994, Akayesu, who was armed at the time of his arrest, went to the house of the victim X, a Tutsi woman, whom he had met earlier in the day. When she refused to open the door, he forced his way in and, with the help of members of the Interahamwe and a communal policeman, killed her with a single blow to the head. The Chamber finds that the acts alleged in paragraph 23 have also been proven. It has been established that on or about 19 April 1994, Akayesu, who was armed at the time of his arrest, went to the house of the victim Y, a Hutu woman, whom he knew. The Chamber finds that the acts alleged in paragraph 24 have also been proven. It has been established that on or about 19 April 1994, Akayesu, who was armed at the time of his arrest, went to the house of the victim Z, a Tutsi woman, whom he had met earlier in the day. It has been established that on or about 19 April 1994, Akayesu, who was armed at the time of his arrest, went to the house of the victim C, a Tutsi woman, whom he had met earlier in the day. When she refused to open the door, he forced his way in and, with the help of members of the Interahamwe and a communal policeman, killed her with a single blow to the head.

The Chamber finds that the acts alleged in paragraph 28 have also been proven. It has been established that on or about 19 April 1994, Akayesu, who was armed at the time of his arrest, went to the house of the victim D, a Tutsi woman, whom he had met earlier in the day. When she refused to open the door, he forced his way in and, with the help of members of the Interahamwe and a communal policeman, killed her with a single blow to the head.

It has been established that on or about 19 April 1994, Akayesu, who was armed at the time of his arrest, went to the house of the victim E, a Tutsi woman, whom he had met earlier in the day. When she refused to open the door, he forced his way in and, with the help of members of the Interahamwe and a communal policeman, killed her with a single blow to the head.

The Chamber finds that the acts alleged in paragraph 30 have also been proven. It has been established that on or about 19 April 1994, Akayesu, who was armed at the time of his arrest, went to the house of the victim F, a Tutsi woman, whom he had met earlier in the day. When she refused to open the door, he forced his way in and, with the help of members of the Interahamwe and a communal policeman, killed her with a single blow to the head.

When she refused to open the door, he forced his way in and, with the help of members of the Interahamwe and a communal policeman, killed her with a single blow to the head.

The Chamber finds that the acts alleged in paragraph 32 have also been proven. It has been established that on or about 19 April 1994, Akayesu, who was armed at the time of his arrest, went to the house of the victim H, a Tutsi woman, whom he had met earlier in the day. When she refused to open the door, he forced his way in and, with the help of members of the Interahamwe and a communal policeman, killed her with a single blow to the head.

The Chamber finds that the acts alleged in paragraph 33 have also been proven. It has been established that on or about 19 April 1994, Akayesu, who was armed at the time of his arrest, went to the house of the victim I, a Tutsi woman, whom he had met earlier in the day. When she refused to open the door, he forced his way in and, with the help of members of the Interahamwe and a communal policeman, killed her with a single blow to the head.

The Chamber finds that the acts alleged in paragraph 34 have also been proven. It has been established that on or about 19 April 1994, Akayesu, who was armed at the time of his arrest, went to the house of the victim J, a Tutsi woman, whom he had met earlier in the day. It has been established that on or about 19 April 1994, Akayesu, who was armed at the time of his arrest, went to the house of the victim K, a Tutsi woman, whom he had met earlier in the day. When she refused to open the door, he forced his way in and, with the help of members of the Interahamwe and a communal policeman, killed her with a single blow to the head.

The Chamber finds that the acts alleged in paragraph 36 have also been proven. It has been established that on or about 19 April 1994, Akayesu, who was armed at the time of his arrest, went to the house of the victim L, a Tutsi woman, whom he had met earlier in the day. When she refused to open the door, he forced his way in and, with the help of members of the Interahamwe and a communal policeman, killed her with a single blow to the head.

The Chamber finds that the acts alleged in paragraph 37 have also been proven. It has been established that on or about 19 April 1994, Akayesu, who was armed at the time of his arrest, went to the house of the victim M, a Tutsi woman, whom he had met earlier in the day. When she refused to open the door, he forced his way in and, with the help of members of the Interahamwe and a communal policeman, killed her with a single blow to the head.

The Chamber finds that the acts alleged in paragraph 38 have also been proven. It has been established that on or about 19 April 1994, Akayesu, who was armed at the time of his arrest, went to the house of the victim N, a Tutsi woman, whom he had met earlier in the day. When she refused to open the door, he forced his way in and, with the help of members of the Interahamwe and a communal policeman, killed her with a single blow to the head.
Chamber. Article 6(1) enunciates the basic principles of individual criminal liability which are probably common to most national criminal jurisdictions. Article 6(3), by contrast, constitutes something of an exception to the principles articulated in Article 6(1), an exception which derives from military law, particularly the principle of the liability of a commander for the acts of his subordinates or "command responsibility". Article 6(3) does not necessarily require the superior to have had knowledge of such to render him criminally liable. The only requirement is that he had reason to know that his subordinates were about to commit or had committed and failed to take the necessary or reasonable measures to prevent such acts or punish the perpetrators thereof.

40. The Chamber then expressed its opinion that with respect to the crimes under its jurisdiction, it should adhere to the concept of notional plurality of offences (cumulative charges) which would render multiple convictions permissible for the same act. As a result, a particular act may constitute both genocide and a crime against humanity.

41. On the crime of genocide, the Chamber recalls that the definition given by Article 2 of the Statute is echoed exactly by the Convention for the Prevention and Repression of the Crime of Genocide. The Chamber notes that Rwanda acceded, by legislative decree, to the Convention on Genocide on 12 February 1975. Thus, punishment of the crime of genocide did exist in Rwanda in 1994, at the time of the acts alleged in the Indictment, and the perpetrator was liable to be brought before the competent courts of Rwanda to answer for this crime.

42. Contrary to popular belief, the crime of genocide does not imply the actual extermination of a group in its entirety, but is understood as such once any one of the acts mentioned in Article 2 of the Statute is committed with the specific intent to destroy "in whole or in part" a national, ethnical, racial or religious group. Genocide is distinct from other crimes inasmuch as it embodies a special intent or dolus specialis. Special intent of a crime is the specific intention, required as a constitutive element of the crime, which requires that the perpetrator clearly seek to produce the act charged. The special intent in the crime of genocide lies in "the intent to destroy, in whole or in part, a national, ethnical, racial or religious group, as such".

43. Specifically, for any of the acts charged under Article 2(2) of the Statute to be a constitutive element of genocide, the act must have been committed against one or several individuals, because such individual or individuals were members of a specific group, and specifically because they belonged to this group. Thus, the victim is chosen not because of his individual identity, but rather on account of his being a member of a national, ethnical, racial or religious group. The victim of the act is therefore a member of a group, targeted as such; hence, the victim of the crime of genocide is the group itself and not the individual alone.

44. On the issue of determining the offender’s specific intent, the Chamber considers that intent is a mental factor which is difficult, even impossible, to determine. This is the reason why, in the absence of a confession from the Accused, his intent can be inferred from a certain number of presumptions of fact. The Chamber considers that it is possible to deduce the genocidal intent inherent in a particular act charged from the general context of the perpetration of other culpable acts systematically directed against that same group, whether these acts were committed by the same offender or by others. Other factors, such as the scale of atrocities committed, their general nature, in a region or a country, or furthermore, the fact of deliberately and systematically targeting victims on account of their membership of a particular group, while excluding the members of other groups, can enable the Chamber to infer the genocidal intent of a particular act.

45. Apart from the crime of genocide, Jean-Paul Akayesu is charged with complicity in genocide and direct and public incitement to commit genocide.

46. In the opinion of the Chamber, an Accused is an accomplice in genocide if he knowingly aided and abetted or provoked a person or persons to commit genocide, knowing that this person or persons were committing genocide, even if the Accused himself lacked the specific intent of destroying in whole or in part, the national, ethnical, racial or religious group, as such.

47. Regarding the crime of direct and public incitement to commit genocide, the Chamber defines it mainly on the basis of Article 91 of the Rwandan Penal Code, as directly provoking another to commit genocide, either through speeches, shouting or threats uttered in public places or at public gatherings, or through the sale or dissemination, offer for sale or display of written material or printed matter in public places or public gatherings or through the public display of placards or posters, or by any other means of audiovisual communication. The moral element of this crime lies in the intent to directly encourage or provoke another to commit genocide. It presupposes the desire of the guilty to create, by his actions, within the person or persons whom he is addressing, the state of mind which is appropriate to the commission of a crime. In other words, the person who is inciting to commit genocide must have the specific intent of genocide: that of destroying in whole or in part, a national, ethnical, racial or religious group, as such. The Chamber believes that incitement is a formal offence, for which the mere method used is culpable. In other words, the offence is considered to have been completed once the incitement has taken place and that it is direct and public, whether or not it was successful.

48. The second crime which comes within the jurisdiction of the Tribunal and of which Jean-Paul Akayesu is charged is that of crimes against humanity. On the law applicable to this crime, the Chamber reviewed the case law on this crime, from the judgements rendered by the Nuremberg and Tokyo Tribunals to more recent cases, including the Touvier and Papon cases in France notably, and the Eichmann trial in Israel. It indicated the circumstances under which the charge of crimes against humanity would be leveled, as provided for by Article 3 of the Statute, under which the act must be committed as part of a widespread or systematic attack directed against a civilian population on discriminatory grounds.

49. The third crime on which the Chamber rendered its conclusions is that for which it has competence pursuant to article 4 of the Statute, which provides that the Tribunal is exercises "in order to display the thighs of Tutsi women". The Interahamwe who were committing the rapes, said to them: "don't ever ask again in what a

53. On the basis of the substantial testimonies brought before it, the Chamber finds that in most cases, the rapes of Tutsi women in Taba, were accompanied with the intent to kill and to mutilate them even before killing them, the intent being to destroy the Tutsi group while inflicting acute suffering on its members.

54. The Chamber has already established that genocide was committed against the Tutsi population which was further developed and enhanced in the 1977 Additional Protocol II. The Chamber decided to analyse separately, the respective conditions of applicability of Article 3 Common to the Geneva Conventions and the Additional Protocol II thereto. It then analysed the conflict which took place in Rwanda in 1994 in the light of those conditions and established that the genocide committed against the Tutsi group was committed.

55. In conclusion, regarding Count One on genocide, the Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that those acts were committed by Akayesu with the specific intent of destroying in whole or in part, a national, ethnical, racial, or religious group, as such.

56. Regarding Count Two, on the crime of complicity in genocide, the Chamber indicated that the act alleged in paragraph 12(A) of the Indictment, that of the criminal act of genocide, constitutes the crime of complicity against the commission of genocide either by members of the Tutsi group or by members of other categories of persons, such as Interahamwe, which are liable to commit genocide. Accordingly, the Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused committed the crime of complicity in genocide.

57. Furthermore, the Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused was aware of the crimes of genocide committed by the group to which he belonged.

58. In sum, the Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused is guilty of genocide in the same way as any other act as long as they were committed with the specific intent to destroy, in whole or in part, a national, ethnical, racial, or religious group, as such.

59. The rape of Tutsi women was systematic and was perpetrated against all Tutsi women and solely against them. A Tutsi woman, married to a Hutu, testified before the Chamber that she was raped because of her ethnic background and that she was not raped because her ethnic background was unknown. As part of the rape, the Tutsi women were subjected to the worst public humiliation, mutilation, and rape several times, often in public, in the Bureau Communal premises or other public places, and often by more than one assailant. These rapes resulted in physical and psychological destruction of Tutsi women, their families and their communities. Sexual violence was an integral part of the process of destruction, specifically targeting Tutsi women and specifically contributing to their destruction and to

distinct crimes, and that the same person could certainly not be both the principal perpetrator of, and accomplice to, the same offence. Given that genocide and complicity in genocide are mutually exclusive by definition, the accused cannot obviously be found guilty of both these crimes for the same act. However, since the Prosecutor has charged the accused with both genocide and complicity in genocide for each of the alleged acts, the Chamber deems it necessary, in the instant case, to rule on Counts 1 and 2 simultaneously, so as to determine, as far as each proven fact is concerned, whether it constituted genocide or complicity in genocide.

57. Count 3 of the Indictment on crimes against humanity, extermination, the Chamber concludes that the murder of the eight refugees described in paragraph 19 of the Indictment as well as the killing of Simon Mutijima, Thaddée Uwanyiligira and Jean Chrysostome Gakuba, Samuel, Tharcisse, Théogène, Phoebe Uwineze and her fiancé, facts described in paragraph 20 of the Indictment, constitute, beyond reasonable doubt, a crime of extermination, perpetrated during a widespread and systematic attack against a civilian population on ethnic grounds and, as such, constitutes a crime against humanity for which Akayesu is individually criminally responsible.

58. Regarding Count Four, on the basis of the facts described in paragraphs 14 and 15 of the Indictment and which it believes are well founded, the Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that by the speeches made in public, Akayesu had the intent to directly create a particular state of mind in his audience necessary to lead to the destruction of the Tutsi group as such. Accordingly, the Chamber finds that the said acts constitute the crime of direct and public incitement to commit genocide. In addition, the Chamber finds that the direct and public incitement to commit genocide engaged in by Akayesu, was indeed successful and did lead to the destruction of a great number of Tutsi in the commune of Tabar.

59. On Count five of the Indictment, the Accused is charged of crimes against humanity(murder) for the acts alleged in paragraphs 15 and 18 of the Indictment. The Chamber finds beyond a reasonable doubt that the killing of Simon Mutijima, Thaddée Uwanyiligira and Jean Chrysostome, was committed as part of a widespread and systematic attack against a civilian population of Rwanda on ethnic grounds, and therefore, a crime against humanity. Akayesu thereby incurs individual criminal responsibility for having ordered and participated in the commission of this crime.

60. On Count seven of the Indictment, crimes against humanity (murder) for the acts alleged in paragraph 19 of the Indictment, the Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the killing of the eight refugees constitutes murder committed as part of a widespread or systematic attack on civilian population on ethnic grounds and as such constitutes a crime against humanity. Accordingly, the Chamber concludes that the Accused, having ordered the said killings, has incurred individual criminal responsibility as charged in Count Seven of the Indictment.

61. On Count Nine of the Indictment the Accused is charged with a crime against humanity (murder), pursuant to Article 3(a) of the Statute for the acts alleged in paragraph 20 of the Indictment. The Chamber finds beyond a reasonable doubt that the killing of the five individuals does indeed constitute murder as part of a widespread or systematic attack against a civilian population of Rwanda on ethnic grounds and such constitutes a crime against humanity. Accordingly Akayesu has incurred individual criminal responsibility for having ordered, aided and abetted the planning and execution of the crime.

62. Under Count 11, Akayesu is charged with crimes against humanity (torture), acts alleged in paragraphs 16, 17, 21, 22 and 23 of the indictment. Based on the above factual findings, the Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the acts described in those paragraphs constitute torture. Having being committed as part of a wide spread and systematic attack against a civilian population on ethnic grounds, they constitute crimes against humanity and render Akayesu criminally liable for having ordered, aided and abetted in their commission.

63. With regard to Counts 13 and 14, relating to the acts described in paragraphs 12A and 12B of the indictment and which it considers proven, the Chamber is also satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that they constitute acts of rape and other inhumane acts, committed as part of a widespread and systematic attack against a civilian population on ethnic grounds and therefore constitute a crime against humanity. Consequently, the Chamber finds the Accused individually criminally liable for the said acts described in counts 13 and 14 and for having through his presence tacitly abetted their commission.

64. With respect to Counts 6, 8, 10, 12 and 15, Akayesu is charged with violations of Common Article 3 of the Geneva Conventions of 1949 in counts 6, 8, 10 and 12, and with violations of Common Article 3 of the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II thereto of 1977 under count 15. The Chamber finds that it has been established beyond reasonable doubt that there was an armed conflict not of an international character between the Government of Rwanda and the RPF at the time of the facts alleged in the Indictment, and that the said conflict was well within the provisions of Common Article 3 and of the Additional Protocol II. The Chamber however finds that the Prosecution has failed to show beyond reasonable doubt that Akayesu was a member of the armed forces and that he was duly mandated and expected, in his capacity as a public official or agent or person otherwise vested with public authority or a de facto representative of the Government, to support and carry out the war effort.
FOR THE FOREGOING REASONS, having considered all of the evidence and the arguments, THE CHAMBER unanimously finds as follows:

Count 1: Guilty of Genocide

Count 2: Not guilty of Complicity in Genocide

Count 5: Guilty of Crime against Humanity (Murder)

Count 7: Guilty of Crime against Humanity (Murder)

Count 9: Guilty of Crime against Humanity (Murder)

Count 11: Guilty of Crime against Humanity (Torture)

Count 13: Guilty of Crime against Humanity (Rape)

Count 14: Guilty of Crime against Humanity (Other Inhumane Acts)

Count 15: Not guilty of Violation of Article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions and of Article 4(2)(e) of Additional Protocol II (Outrage upon personal dignity, in particular Rape, Degrading and Humiliating Treatment and Indecent Assault)

International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia

Prosecutor v. Anto Furundžija
Judgement of 10 December 1998 (summary)

Case No. IT-95-17/1-T
before the Trial Chamber, as well as a discussion of the more substantial procedural issues that arose over the course of these proceedings.

Section II contains a summary of the submissions of the parties in relation to the charges against the accused in the Amended Indictment and the underlying facts.

Section III addresses the jurisdictional prerequisites for the application of Article 3, namely the existence of an armed conflict. In this context, the Trial Chamber finds that the test formulated by the Appeals Chamber of the International Tribunal in Tadic is the correct test to apply in determining the existence of an armed conflict. Based on the evidence submitted by both parties, the Trial Chamber finds that, at the material time, a state of armed conflict existed in central Bosnia and Herzegovina between the Croatian Defence Council ("the HVO") and the Army of Bosnia and Herzegovina ("the ABiH"). In Section IV, the Trial Chamber finds a nexus between this armed conflict and the acts underlying the charges against the accused.

Section V addresses the evidence relating to the charges in the Amended Indictment. This section begins with an overview of the relevant evidence and the arguments of the parties relating thereto, then proceeds to examine the background and circumstances leading up to the criminal acts, is then discussed. The following sub-section places the re-opening proceedings in procedural context and examines the evidence relating to the central issue of those proceedings, namely the extent to which the reliability of Witness A’s evidence may have been affected by any psychological disorder arising out of her traumatic ordeal. In this respect, the Trial Chamber examines the evidence presented through expert witnesses for both the Prosecution and the Defence on the issue of post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) and its potential effect on memory. It is found that Witness A’s memory regarding material aspects of the events through which she suffered has not been affected by any disorder she may have had. The Trial Chamber notes that the expert evidence demonstrates that even when a person is suffering from PTSD she or he may still be a reliable witness, and accepts Witness A’s testimony that she has sufficiently recollected the material aspects of the relevant events. The Trial Chamber then examines the inconsistencies in Witness A’s testimony and makes a finding as to its general reliability. Section V concludes with the Trial Chamber’s factual findings in relation to the events alleged in the Amended Indictment.

In Section VI, the Trial Chamber commences a discussion of the elements of each of the offences charged in the Amended Indictment. This section contains a comprehensive analysis of the nature and status of the prohibition against torture under conventional and customary international law, as well as providing a definition of torture under international humanitarian law. In this regard, the Trial Chamber finds that the prohibition against torture has attained the status of jus cogens. Further, the requisite elements of the offence of torture are found to be as follows:

The intentional infliction, by act or omission, of severe pain or suffering, whether physical or mental, for the purpose of obtaining information or a confession or of punishing, intimidating, humiliating or coercing the victim or a third person, or of discriminating on any ground against the victim or a third person. For such an act to constitute torture, one of the parties thereto must be a public official or must, at any rate, act in a non-private capacity, e.g. as a de facto organ of a State or any other authority wielding entity.

This section continues with a discussion of the prohibition against rape and other serious sexual assaults under international law. The Trial Chamber finds it is indisputable that rape and other serious sexual assaults in situations of armed conflict entail criminal liability of the perpetrators. In this context, the Trial Chamber upholds the recent finding by Trial Chamber II of the ICTY in Prosecutor v. Delalić et al., that in certain circumstances, rape may amount to torture under international law. However, this Trial Chamber has seen fit to expand the definition of rape first formulated by Trial Chamber I of the ICTR in Akayesu and followed in the Delalić Judgement. Thus, the Trial Chamber finds that the following comprise what may be accepted as the requisite elements of the offence of rape under international criminal law:

The sexual penetration, however slight, either of the vagina or anus of the victim by the penis of the perpetrator, or any other object used by the perpetrator, or of the mouth of the victim by the penis of the perpetrator, where such penetration is effected by coercion or force or threat of force against the victim or a third person.

In Section VI(B), the Trial Chamber turns its attention to analysing the content of the various heads under which individual criminal liability may be incurred pursuant to Article 7(1) of the Statute of the International Tribunal. In this regard, the Trial Chamber finds the necessary elements of aiding and abetting under international criminal law to comprise: an actus reus requiring practical assistance, encouragement, or moral support which has a substantial effect on the perpetration of the crime and a complementary mens rea requiring knowledge that such acts assist the commission of the offence.

The Trial Chamber further elaborates the principles of individual criminal responsibility in the context of torture by finding that an accused, who would otherwise be liable as an aider and abettor to torture under the foregoing standard, will be held responsible as a co-perpetrator of torture, where the accused participates in an integral part of the torture and partakes of the prohibited purpose behind the torture, i.e., the intent to obtain information or a confession, to punish or intimidate, humiliate, coerce or discriminate against the victim or a third person.

Section VII of the Judgement sets forth the legal findings of the Trial Chamber with respect to each of the charges against the accused in the Amended Indictment.

Mr. Furundžija, will you please stand to receive the Judgement of this Trial Chamber.

For the foregoing reasons, having considered all of the evidence, the submissions of the parties and the Statute and Rules by which it is bound, the Trial Chamber finds as follows with respect to the accused, Anto Furundžija:

Count 13: As a co-perpetrator, GUILTY of a Violation of the Laws or Customs of War (torture).

Count 14: For aiding and abetting, GUILTY of a Violation of the Laws or Customs of War (outrages upon personal dignity, including rape).

Pursuant to sub-Rule 85(A)(vi) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence, the Trial Chamber heard the oral submissions of the Prosecution and the Defence on sentencing in this case, on 22 June 1998. It sets out its discussion and findings in this regard in Section VIII of the Judgement. The Trial Chamber considers that the imposition of sentence must take account of various mitigating and aggravating factors as well as the sentencing practices of the courts of the former Yugoslavia.

The Trial Chamber imposes sentence as follows:

Count 13: For torture as a Violation of the Laws or Customs of War, the Trial Chamber sentences you, Anto Furundžija, to ten years’ imprisonment.

Count 14: For outrages upon personal dignity, including rape, as a Violation of the Laws or Customs of War, the Trial Chamber sentences you, Anto Furundžija, to eight years’ imprisonment.

The Trial Chamber has determined that the foregoing sentences are to be served concurrently, inter se. In addition, pursuant to sub-Rule 101(D) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence, persons convicted by the International Tribunal are entitled to credit for time spent in custody pending surrender to the Tribunal and time spent in detention pending trial or appeal. Accordingly, eleven months and twenty-two days shall be deducted from the sentence today imposed on Anto Furundžija, together with such additional time as he may serve pending the determination of any appeal. In accordance with Rule 102 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence, Anto Furundžija’s sentence, subject to the above mentioned deduction, shall begin to run from today.

Pursuant to Article 27 of the Statute and Rule 103 of the Rules, Anto Furundžija shall serve his sentence in a State designated by the President of the International Tribunal. The transfer of Anto Furundžija to the designated State shall be effected as soon as possible after the time-limit for appeal has elapsed. In the event that notice of appeal is given, the transfer of the accused, Anto Furundžija, if compelled by the outcome of such an appeal, shall be effected as soon as possible after the determination of the appeal by the Appeals Chamber. Until such time as his transfer is effected, Anto Furundžija shall remain in the custody of the International Tribunal, in accordance with Rule 102.

This concludes the Judgement of the Trial Chamber.

Thank you. The Trial Chamber now stands adjourned.

Prosecutor v. Zejnil Delalić et al. (“Čelebići”)
Judgement of 20 February 20012 (summary)

Case No. IT-96-21
Appeal Judgment in the Čelebići Case

The Appeals Chamber has concluded that, on the evidence before the Trial Chamber, it was open to a reasonable tribunal of fact to find that Zdravko Muci, was found guilty of personal responsibility for the unlawful confinement and treatment of civilians and prisoners. The Appeals Chamber has held that, on the evidence before the Trial Chamber, it was open to a reasonable tribunal of fact to find that Hazim Delić, was found by the Trial Chamber to have acted as the Deputy Commander of the camp, and was found guilty of personal responsibility for the unlawful confinement and treatment of civilians and prisoners. The Appeals Chamber has held that, on the evidence before the Trial Chamber, it was open to a reasonable tribunal of fact to find that Esad Landžo, was found by the Trial Chamber to have been a guard at the camp, and he was found guilty of personal responsibility for the unlawful confinement and treatment of civilians and prisoners.

The challenge by Delali and Muci to the Trial Chamber's findings of fact has been made out. Article 5 of the Statute and its Rules of Procedure and Evidence provide that a person is entitled to a fair trial. Where, as in the present case, the evidence establishes the guilt of an accused based upon the same conduct under both Article 2 and Article 3 of the Statute, the conviction must be entered for the offence under Article 2. Selective prosecution

The Appeals Chamber has also rejected the argument that Judge Odio Odno should never have accepted the appointment of the Judge of the Tribunal as the Judge of the United Nations War Crimes Tribunal. The appointment of the Judge to the United Nations War Crimes Tribunal was made by the member states of the UN, and the Judge Odio Odno was subsequently appointed as a Judge of the Tribunal by the member states. Landžo challenged his sentence on the basis that it was manifestly excessive. He sought to show a disparity between his sentence and sentences imposed on persons convicted in other cases before the Tribunal. The Appeals Chamber has not accepted that the comparisons made by him are valid. It has also concluded that the Trial Chamber adequately considered the mitigating factors applicable to Landžo.

Disposition
The formal orders made by the Appeals Chamber in the Disposition section of the judgment are as follows:

1. In relation to Counts 1 and 2 of the Indictment, the Appeals Chamber ALLOWS the ninth and tenth grounds of appeal filed by Hazim Delić, it QUASHES the verdict of the Trial Chamber accordingly, and it enters a verdict that Hazim Delić is NOT GUILTY upon those counts.

2. In relation to the grounds of appeal relating to cumulative convictions, the Appeals Chamber ALLOWS the twenty-first ground of appeal filed by Hazim Delić and the seventh ground of appeal filed by Zdravko Mucić; it DISMISSES Counts 14, 34, 39, 45 and 47 against Zdravko Mucić; it DISMISSES Counts 4, 12, 19, 22, 43 and 47 against Hazim Delić, and it DISMISSES Counts 2, 6, 8, 12, 16, 25, 31, 37, and 47 against Esad Landžo. It REMITS to a Trial Chamber to be nominated by the President of the Tribunal the issue of what adjustment, if any, should be made to the sentences imposed on Hazim Delić, Zdravko Mucić, and Esad Landžo to take account of the dismissal of these counts.

3. In relation to the eleventh ground of appeal filed by Zdravko Mucić, the Appeals Chamber FINDS that the Trial Chamber erred in making adverse reference when imposing sentence to the fact that he had not given oral evidence in the trial, and it DIRECTS the Reconstituted Trial Chamber to consider the effect, if any, of that error on the sentence to be imposed on Mucić.

4. The Appeals Chamber ALLOWS the fourth ground of appeal filed by the Prosecution alleging that the sentence of seven years imposed on Zdravko Mucić was inadequate, and it REMITS the matter of the imposition of an appropriate revised sentence for Zdravko Mucić to the Reconstituted Trial Chamber, with the indication that, had it not been necessary to take into account a possible adjustment in sentence because of the dismissal of the counts referred to, it would have imposed a sentence of around ten years.

5. The Appeals Chamber DISMISSES each of the remaining grounds of appeal filed by each of the appellants.

The Appeals Chamber’s reasons for these orders are now published.

Prosecutor v. Dario Kordić and Mario Čerkez
Judgement of 26 February 2001 (summary)

Case No. IT-95-14/2
Press Release

The Trial Chamber also finds that persecution may include conduct not specifically listed as a crime but which has the same level of gravity as the other crimes listed in the Article. In this case, the Trial Chamber finds that two alleged acts do not rise to that level of gravity, namely, persecution in the form of encouraging and promoting hatred, by propaganda and otherwise, and persecution in employment.

DARIO KORDIĆ AND MARIO ČERKEZ

JUDGEMENT OF TRIAL CHAMBER III IN THE KORDIĆ AND ČERKEZ CASE

The Trial Chamber finds that Dario Kordić, former President of the National House of Parliament of the Republic of Croatia, and Mario Čerkez, former President of the City of Vitez, participated in the attacks on the villages in the Laka valley.

The Trial Chamber finds that Dario Kordić, as President of the National House of Parliament of the Republic of Croatia, had power to discipline or punish troops, and the Trial Chamber finds that he has no liability under Article 7(3) of the Statute concerning command responsibility.

The Trial Chamber finds that Mario Čerkez, as commander of the Vitezka Brigade, participated in the attacks on Vitez, Stari Vitez and Vreštica… and failed to take the necessary measures to prevent those attacks, failed to punish those who were responsible for them.

The result has been an extremely long trial lasting 20 months in which a great deal of evidence was put before the Court. In all, 241 witnesses gave evidence and over 4,300 exhibits were produced. The transcript runs to over 30,000 pages.

What follows is a summary of the written Judgement and forms no part of it. That Judgement is available today.
On 18 April the HVO attacked the villages in the Kis eljak municipality. These attacks were part of the general offensive launched by the HVO against the Muslims in this area and Dario Kordi, the leader was associated with them.

However, as already noted, the Trial Chamber finds that Dario Kordi did not possess the authority either to command or to order the attack.

Finally, the Trial Chamber applies the principle approved by the Appeals Chamber recently in relation to cumulative convictions. As a result, the accused will be acquitted of those Counts for which a cumulative conviction would be inappropriate.

Counts 1 and 2: violations of the laws or customs of war (unlawful attack on civilians).

Counts 3 and 4: murder, wilful killing, inhumane acts, wilfully causing great suffering or serious injury, violations of the laws or customs of war (murder, wilful killing, inhumane acts, wilfully causing great suffering or serious injury).

Counts 14 and 15: violations of the laws or customs of war (inhuman treatment).

Counts 16 and 17: inhumane acts, wilfully causing great suffering or serious injury, violations of the laws or customs of war (inhuman treatment).

Counts 18 and 19: violations of the laws or customs of war and grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions (inhuman treatment).

Counts 20 and 21: grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions; violations of the laws or customs of war (destruction and plunder).

Counts 22 and 23: grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions and violations of the laws or customs of war (extensive destruction of property, wanton destruction, plunder).

Counts 24 and 25: grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions, violations of the laws or customs of war (extensive destruction of property, wanton destruction, plunder).

Counts 28 and 29: violations of the laws or customs of war (inhuman treatment).

Counts 30 and 31: violations of the laws or customs of war and grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions (inhuman treatment).

Counts 32 and 33: grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions; violations of the laws or customs of war (inhuman treatment).

Counts 34 and 35: violations of the laws or customs of war (inhuman treatment).

Counts 36 and 37: violations of the laws or customs of war and grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions (inhuman treatment).

Counts 38 and 39: a crime against humanity and grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions (inhuman treatment).

Counts 40 and 41: grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions; violations of the laws or customs of war (inhuman treatment).

Counts 42 and 43: violations of the laws or customs of war and grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions (inhuman treatment).

Counts 44 and 45: violations of the laws or customs of war (inhuman treatment).

We turn now to the allegation that the accused are also guilty by reason of their superior responsibility for the events that took place during the campaign against the Muslim population of the Kis eljak municipality. As already noted, the Trial Chamber finds that Dario Kordi, the Commander of the Viteška Brigade during the campaign against Muslim population of the Kis eljak municipality, was responsible for the events that took place during the campaign against the Muslim population of the Kis eljak municipality.

Turning now to the question of sentence, the Trial Chamber makes some general points. The Trial Chamber also finds that there was a pattern of destruction and plunder in all the places attacked by the HVO, and that the HVO deliberately targeted mosques and other religious and educational institutions. All the mosques were treated or that the treatment was part of any common plan or design.

The Trial Chamber finds that there was a pattern of destruction and plunder in all the places attacked by the HVO, and that the HVO deliberately targeted mosques and other religious and educational institutions. All the mosques were treated or that the treatment was part of any common plan or design.

The Trial Chamber makes the following findings about the participation of the accused in the campaign of persecution. Whatever positions he may have held, the evidence does not support the contention that Dario Kordi was in the very highest echelons of the Bosnian Croat leadership or that he conceived the campaign of persecution. He was a regional leader and lent himself enthusiastically to the common design of persecution by planning, preparing and ordering those parts of the campaign which fell within his sphere of authority.

reflect the evidence in this case and the role of these accused as found by this Trial Chamber. Both accused have been convicted of numerous offences. They all arise from the same common design which led to the persecution and the “ethnic cleansing” of the Bosnian Muslims of the Lašva Valley and surroundings. The resulting sustained campaign involved a succession of attacks on villages and towns which were characterised by a ruthlessness and savagery and in which no distinction was made as to the age of its victims: young and old were either murdered or expelled and their houses were burned. The total number of dead may never be known, but it runs into hundreds, with thousands expelled. Offences of this level of barbarity could not be more grave and those who participate in them must expect sentences of commensurate severity to mark the outrage of the international community.

Dario Kordić: Your role in the offences was an important one. As a regional political leader in Central Bosnia, with particular authority in the Lašva Valley, you were the effective political commander in the area where the majority of the offences were committed. As already noted, the Trial Chamber has not accepted the full extent of the Prosecution case and has not found that you were in the highest echelons of the leadership of the campaign of persecution. Likewise, you have been acquitted of some of the offences arising from individual acts of terror and the massacre at Stupni Do. Therefore, you are not to be sentenced as an architect of the persecution or the prime mover in it. Nonetheless, you joined the campaign enthusiastically and played an instrumental part in the Lašva Valley offensives in 1993, in particular in ordering the attack of Ahmići and the other villages in April 1993. For your part in that dreadful episode you deserve appropriate punishment. The fact that you were a politician and took no part in the actual execution of the crimes makes no difference; you played your part as surely as the men who fired the guns. Indeed, the fact that you were a leader aggravates the offences. You have offered no mitigation and there is none. The Trial Chamber considers that your overall criminality can be best reflected in a single sentence. Dario Kordić, you are sentenced to 25 years imprisonment.

Mario Čerkez: Your position is different from that of your co-accused. You were a soldier and a middle-ranking HVO commander. The Trial Chamber notes that you have no previous experience of command and that nothing in your earlier life could have prepared you for it. However, you were the Commander of the Vitezka Brigade during the time of the terrible events in the Lašva Valley and led it in the assaults which resulted in civilian death and destruction. While the Trial Chamber has found that your troops were not involved in the massacre at Ahmići, you played your part in the campaign of persecution, aggravated because of your role as a commander. While there was positive testimony as to your character and personality, none of the matters submitted as mitigating circumstances amount to mitigation of these international crimes. The Trial Chamber considers that your overall criminality can be best reflected in a single sentence. Mario Čerkez, you are sentenced to 15 years imprisonment.

The period of time the accused have spent in custody of the International Tribunal, that is the period from 6 October 1997 to the date of this Judgement, shall be deducted from the sentences.
International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia

Prosecutor v. Enver Hadžihasanović and Amir Kubura
Judgement of 22 April 2008 (summary)

Case No. IT-01-47
A. Hadžihasanović's appeal concerning the fairness of the trial and evidentiary issues

In his first, second, and as part of his third and sixth grounds of appeal, Hadžihasanović submits that the Trial Chamber committed numerous errors infringing upon his right to a fair trial under Article 21 of the Statute.

For the reasons set out in the Judgement, the Appeals Chamber finds that Hadžihasanović failed to demonstrate that the Trial Chamber erred in law or in fact and that his right to a fair trial was infringed.

B. Appeal concerning Hadžihasanović's individual criminal responsibility as a superior

I now turn to Hadžihasanović's individual criminal responsibility as a superior. Under his third ground of appeal, Hadžihasanović argues that the Trial Chamber erred by finding that he failed to take the adequate measures required to punish those responsible for the murder of Mladen Havranek and the cruel treatment of six prisoners at the Slavonija Furniture Salon on 5 August 1993, as well as to prevent similar crimes in the other detention facilities in Bugojno.

The Appeals Chamber concurs with the Trial Chamber's finding that the evidence before it provided a sufficient basis to conclude that the perpetrators of the 5 August 1993 Slavonija Furniture Salon crimes were held responsible for breaches of military discipline by the military disciplinary organ in Bugojno and that no criminal report was filed with the District Military Prosecutor's Office regarding the matter. The Appeals Chamber agrees with the Trial Chamber that, given the gravity of the offences for which the perpetrators were being punished - murder and cruel treatment - Hadžihasanović could not consider as acceptable punishment the disciplinary sanction of a period of detention not exceeding 60 days.

The Appeals Chamber however finds that no reasonable trier of fact could have found beyond reasonable doubt that the 3rd Corps failed to initiate an investigation or criminal proceedings against the perpetrators of the murder and cruel treatment by filing a report with the Bugojno municipal public prosecutor. The report of 20 August 1993 from the chief of the civilian police in Bugojno regarding alleged war crimes committed against Croats, which establishes that the Bugojno municipal public prosecutor met with European Community observers to discuss alleged war crimes committed against Croats, including the murder of Mladen Havranek, indeed raises a reasonable doubt as to whether the 307th Brigade, subordinated to the 3rd Corps headed by Hadžihasanović, filed a criminal report regarding the 5 August 1993 Slavonija Furniture Salon crimes with the Bugojno municipal public prosecutor.

The Appeals Chamber recalls that a superior need not dispense punishment personally and may discharge his duty by reporting the matter to the competent authority. In the present case, the Appeals Chamber finds that the reporting of the 5 August 1993 Slavonija Furniture Salon crimes to the Bugojno municipal public prosecutor, in conjunction with the disciplinary sanctions imposed by the military disciplinary organ, constituted necessary and reasonable measures to punish the perpetrators.

For the reasons set out in the Judgement, the Appeals Chamber reverses Hadžihasanović's convictions for having failed to take the adequate measures required to punish those responsible for the murder of Mladen Havranek and the cruel treatment of six prisoners at the Slavonija Furniture Salon on 5 August 1993.

Under his third ground of appeal, Hadžihasanović also contends that the Trial Chamber erred in finding that he had reason to know of the acts of mistreatment committed in the Bugojno Detention Facilities as of 18 August 1993.

To reach this conclusion, the Trial Chamber relied on its previous finding that Hadžihasanović had failed to take adequate measures to punish the perpetrators of the 5
I now turn to Hadžihasanović's arguments under his fifth ground of appeal concerning the murder and cruel treatment in Orašac in October 1993.

Hadžihasanović submits that the Trial Chamber erred by finding that he failed to take necessary and reasonable measures to prevent the murder of Dragan Popović and the cruel treatment committed by the El Mujahedin detachment in the Orašac Camp against five civilians abducted on 19 October 1993. He argues that the Trial Chamber erred in finding that he had de jure authority over the members of the El Mujahedin detachment and in finding that he exercised effective control over the El Mujahedin detachment. Since de jure authority is only one factor that helps to establish effective control, and because the question is resolvable on the basis of effective control alone, the Appeals Chamber declines to address whether Hadžihasanović had de jure authority over the El Mujahedin detachment.

The Trial Chamber found that Hadžihasanović exercised effective control over the El Mujahedin detachment on the basis that the evidence before it showed that three types of indicia of effective control were satisfied, namely: the power to give orders and have them executed, the conduct of combat operations involving the El Mujahedin detachment, and the absence of any other authority over the El Mujahedin detachment.

First, the Appeals Chamber recognises that the power to give orders and have them executed can serve as an indicium of effective control. In the present case, the Trial Chamber took certain orders of re-subordination into account, though to varying degrees, as indicia of effective control. However, for the reasons set out in the Judgement, the Appeals Chamber finds that none of the re-subordination orders, either individually or collectively, is sufficient to establish the existence of effective control.

Second, the Appeals Chamber finds that while the findings relied upon by the Trial Chamber confirm that the El Mujahedin detachment took part in several combat operations in September and October 1993 and that this occurred within the framework established by the Operational Group, they do not establish the 3rd Corps as the de jure leader of the El Mujahedin detachment. The Appeals Chamber finds that sufficient support for the conclusion that Hadžihasanović had effective control over the El Mujahedin detachment in the sense of having the material ability to prevent or punish its members should they commit crimes. Notably, several findings of the Trial Chamber demonstrate that the El Mujahedin detachment maintained a significant degree of independence from the units it fought alongside on various issues, which belies the Trial Chamber's conclusion that the El Mujahedin detachment was under the effective control of the 3rd Corps. The Trial Chamber found, for example, that the detachment members were anxious to maintain their independence and reserved the right to decide whether they would take part in combat operations.

Thus, while these Trial Chamber's findings indicate that the 3rd Corps cooperated with the El Mujahedin detachment, they are insufficient to establish the existence of a relationship of effective control between the 3rd Corps and the El Mujahedin detachment.

Third, with regard to the absence of any other authority over the El Mujahedin detachment, the Appeals Chamber finds that some of the Trial Chamber's findings suggest that the El Mujahedin detachment was more under the influence of Muslim clerics, than under that of the 3rd Corps. However, the Appeals Chamber disputes the relevance of the criterion identified by the Trial Chamber as an indicator of the existence of effective control. Hadžihasanović's effective control cannot be established by process of elimination. The absence of any other authority over the El Mujahedin detachment in no way implies that Hadžihasanović exercised effective control in this case.

Last, I turn to Hadžihasanović's argument that he could not have effective control over the El Mujahedin detachment if the only way for the 3rd Corps to obtain the release of the civilians abducted on 19 October 1993 was to use force.

August 1993 crimes. However, the Appeals Chamber found that this latter finding was in error. Considering that none of the Trial Chamber's remaining findings, whether taken individually or collectively, sufficiently supports the Trial Chamber's conclusion that Hadžihasanović had reason to know of the acts of cruel treatment in the Bugojno Detention Facilities as of 18 August 1993, the Appeals Chamber finds that no reasonable trier of fact could have concluded, given the evidence, that Hadžihasanović possessed the requisite knowledge under Article 7(3) of the Statute, which would trigger his responsibility to prevent or punish such acts.

For the reasons set out in the Judgement, the Appeals Chamber reverses Hadžihasanović's convictions for having failed to take adequate measures to prevent or punish the acts of mistreatment in the Bugojno Detention Facilities as of 18 August 1993.

Under his fourth ground of appeal concerning the cruel treatment at the Zenica Music School, the Appeals Chamber finds that the Trial Chamber erred by finding that he failed to take the reasonable measures necessary to punish the perpetrators and prevent such acts.

First, Hadžihasanović argues that the Trial Chamber failed to properly consider the evidence provided by Witness Džemal Merdan - his Deputy-Commander - and Witness HF - a senior officer of the 3rd Corps Command - that measures were taken by the 3rd Corps to investigate allegations of mistreatment at the Zenica Music School. The Appeals Chamber notes that the Trial Chamber did not ignore the testimony of these two witnesses but, after reviewing the totality of the evidence before it, decided to accord greater weight to other evidence. The Trial Chamber, based on the many accounts by former prisoners at the Music School, that the Zenica Music School's basement consistently housed between ten and thirty civilians from 18 April 1993 until 20 August 1993. The Trial Chamber further found that Hadžihasanović received alarming information from other sources, which established the need for further inquiry based on allegations of mistreatment. Thus, the Trial Chamber's finding that an investigation of the allegations of cruel treatment would have enabled Hadžihasanović to identify the persons responsible for the violence does not turn solely on the truthfulness of Witnesses Džemal Merdan and HF.

Second, Hadžihasanović argues that the Trial Chamber failed to properly consider evidence that the arrest, detention and alleged mistreatment of detainees at the Music School was concealed by some members of the 7th Brigade. The Appeals Chamber finds that the Trial Chamber noted that there was an intention on the part of the soldiers present at the School to conceal the mistreatment inflicted on the detainees but concluded that there was no bearing on Hadžihasanović's criminal responsibility. Indeed, the Trial Chamber found that Hadžihasanović had received information that his subordinates were committing mistreatment at the Zenica Music School from sources outside the 7th Brigade, such that any attempted concealment by members of the 7th Brigade was rendered secondary.

Third, Hadžihasanović submits that the measures he took with respect to the Zenica Music School were necessary and reasonable. The Trial Chamber considered Hadžihasanović's arguments that he had taken preventive measures to ensure that civilians and prisoners of war were treated in accordance with international humanitarian law and that he took steps to investigate allegations of mistreatment. The Trial Chamber nevertheless concluded that Hadžihasanović did not make genuine efforts to initiate an appropriate investigation into the allegations of cruel treatment whereas such an investigation would have enabled him to discover the identity of the persons responsible for the violence.

For the reasons set out in the Judgement, the Appeals Chamber finds that Hadžihasanović failed to demonstrate that no reasonable trier of fact could have concluded that, given the evidence, he failed to take necessary and reasonable measures to punish the perpetrators of the cruel treatment at the Zenica Music School and prevent further mistreatment.
The Appeals Chamber finds that the military operation that the Trial Chamber expected the 3rd Corps to undertake to rescue those hostages would be comparable to that necessary to obtain the release of hostages from an enemy force rather than a force under its effective control. Regardless of whether the use of force was materially feasible or advisable to save the lives of the hostages, the facts of the case reveal a situation in which the relationship between the El Mujahedin detachment and the 3rd Corps was not one of subordination. Instead, it was close to overt hostility since the only way to control the El Mujahedin detachment was to attack them as if they were a distinct enemy force. This scenario is at odds with the premise of the Trial Chamber that the El Mujahedin detachment was subordinated to the 3rd Corps. This conclusion further confirms that Hadžihasanović did not have effective control over the El Mujahedin detachment.

For the reasons set out in the Judgement, the Appeals Chamber concludes that no reasonable trier of fact could have concluded that it was established beyond reasonable doubt that Hadžihasanović had effective control over the El Mujahedin detachment between 13 August and 1 November 1993. As a result, the Appeals Chamber reverses Hadžihasanović's conviction for having failed to prevent the crimes of cruel treatment committed between 19 and 31 October 1993 and the murder of Dragan Popović.

C. Kubura’s and Prosecution’s appeals concerning Kubura’s individual criminal responsibility as a superior

I now turn to Kubura’s individual criminal responsibility as a superior. Under his first ground of appeal, Kubura submits that the Trial Chamber erred in convicting him of failing to take necessary and reasonable measures to punish the acts of plunder committed in June 1993 in the Ovnak area. He argues that the Trial Chamber erred in finding that the 7th Brigade was involved in the plunder committed in the Ovnak area and/or that he knew of or had reason to know that the 7th Brigade was involved in the acts of plunder committed in the Ovnak area.

First, with regard to the 7th Brigade's involvement, the Appeals Chamber finds that the documents relied upon by the Trial Chamber in reaching the finding that Kubura's subordinates engaged in plunder in Vareš specifically refer to the 7th Brigade's involvement in the events of 4 November 1993, the Trial Chamber notes that the 7th Brigade was involved in the acts of plunder committed in Vareš. The Appeals Chamber finds that the evidence does not support a finding that Kubura had reason to know of the 7th Brigade's involvement in the acts of plunder committed in Vareš.

Second, with regard to Kubura's knowledge of the acts of plunder in Vareš, the Appeals Chamber finds that the Trial Chamber erred in finding that the 7th Brigade committed plunder in Vareš in November 1993. The Appeals Chamber finds that the evidence does not support a finding that Kubura had reason to know of the acts of plunder committed in Vareš.

Having applied the correct legal standard to the evidence contained in the trial record, the Appeals Chamber recognizes that Kubura's knowledge of and failure to punish his subordinates' acts of plunder was likely to be understood by his subordinates at least as acceptance, if not encouragement, of such conduct, such that it increased the risk that further acts of plunder, such as those in Vareš, would be committed again. The Appeals Chamber deems it of significant importance that the Trial Chamber took into account the circumstances of the case in determining that Kubura had reason to know sufficient to trigger a duty to prevent his subordinates' acts of plunder in Vareš. The Appeals Chamber finds that this constitutes an error of law.

Under his second ground of appeal, Kubura submits that the Trial Chamber erred in convicting him of failing to take necessary and reasonable measures to prevent or punish the plunder which took place in Vareš in November 1993. He argues that the Trial Chamber erred in finding that the 7th Brigade was involved in the commission of acts of plunder in Vareš in November 1993 and/or that he knew of or had reason to know of these acts.

First, with regard to the 7th Brigade's involvement, the Appeals Chamber finds that the Trial Chamber erred in finding that the 7th Brigade was involved in the commission of acts of plunder in Vareš in November 1993. The Appeals Chamber deems it of significant importance that the Trial Chamber took into account the circumstances of the case in determining that Kubura had reason to know sufficient to trigger a duty to prevent his subordinates' acts of plunder in Vareš. The Appeals Chamber finds that this constitutes an error of law.

However, with respect to Kubura's knowledge of his subordinates' acts of plunder whilst they were ongoing, the Appeals Chamber finds that Kubura received orders on 4 November 1993 alerting him to plunder in Vareš, but that he failed to take necessary and reasonable measures to prevent or punish the acts of plunder committed in Vareš.

While Kubura's knowledge of his subordinates' past plunder in Ovnak and his failure to punish them did not, in itself, amount to actual knowledge of the acts of plunder in Vareš, the Appeals Chamber concurs with the Trial Chamber that the orders he received on 4 November 1993 constituted, at the very least, sufficiently alarming information justifying further inquiry.
The Appeals Chamber accordingly finds that Kubura possessed knowledge sufficient to trigger a duty to prevent his subordinates from committing further plunder in Vareš as of his receipt of the orders authorising him to the ongoing plunder. For the reasons set out in the Judgement, the Appeals Chamber also finds that Kubura’s knowledge of his subordinates’ acts of plunder in Vareš was also sufficient to trigger his duty to punish them.

With regard to the measures taken by Kubura to prevent his subordinates from committing further acts of plunder in Vareš, the Appeals Chamber recalls that, following the order of 4 November 1993 from the Operational Group Istok Command, Kubura withdrew his troops from Vareš the very same day and then forbade the members of the 7th Brigade from entering or staying in Vareš on 5 November 1993.

For the reasons set out in the Judgement, the Appeals Chamber finds that Kubura took necessary and reasonable measures, given the circumstances of the case, to prevent the plunder by putting a stop to the plunder once it had started so it would not be repeated. The Appeals Chamber however upholds the Trial Chamber’s finding that Kubura failed to take necessary and reasonable measures to punish his subordinates’ acts of plunder in Vareš on 5 November 1993. Kubura’s conviction as a superior as under Article 7(3) of the Statute for the plunder in Vareš is accordingly maintained.

I now turn to the Prosecution’s second ground of appeal that Kubura should have been convicted under Article 7(3) of the Statute for the wanton destruction committed by his subordinates in Vareš on 4 November 1993.

The Trial Chamber found that Kubura’s subordinates committed wanton destruction in Vareš on 4 November 1993 but that it was not proven beyond reasonable doubt that he knew or had reason to know of this crime.

First, as to whether Kubura received information concerning the destruction of property in Vareš, the Trial Chamber found, as correctly remarked by the Prosecution, that the Operational Group Istok issued a combat report to the 3rd Corps Command on 4 November 1993 noting that the chaotic situation in Vareš, the Operational Group Istok requested that the 3rd Corps Command send police military units to the town of Vareš. In response, the 3rd Corps Command issued a combat report stating that it had issued orders that brigades use military police forces to prevent chaos and the destruction of property in Vareš. The Trial Chamber found that the 7th Brigade neither received the 4 November 1993 Operational Group Istok combat report to the 3rd Corps Command nor the 3rd Corps Command’s combat report in response. Yet, from the content of the 3rd Corps Command combat report, it inferred that the 7th Brigade “must have received” orders to use military police forces to prevent chaos and the destruction of property in Vareš given that the 7th Brigade was subordinated to the 3rd Corps Command and present in Vareš. The 3rd Corps Command combat report, however, failed to make explicit the identity of the perpetrators of the acts of wanton destruction in Vareš. The Appeals Chamber notes that other brigades were also present in Vareš on 4 November 1993.

The Trial Chamber also found that the Operational Group Istok issued a separate order on 4 November 1993, specifically directed to the 7th Brigade Commander, which explicitly refers to activities of plunder and the need to prevent them but does not mention acts of destruction. The Appeals Chamber concurs with the Trial Chamber that, given the evidence taken as a whole, the inference that the 7th Brigade must have received orders from the 3rd Corps Command on 4 November 1993 does not establish, by itself, Kubura’s knowledge of his subordinates’ acts of wanton destruction.

Second, the Appeals Chamber considers that Kubura’s knowledge of the acts of wanton destruction cannot automatically be inferred from his awareness of the plunder in Vareš on 4 November 1993. Indeed, the Trial Chamber’s finding regarding Kubura’s knowledge of the plunder in Vareš on 4 November 1993 rests on a much broader evidentiary basis. Furthermore, the Trial Chamber relied on Kubura’s knowledge of and failure to punish his subordinates’ past acts of plunder. The Trial Chamber made no such findings with respect to any past acts of wanton destruction by Kubura’s subordinates. Thus, while there was a sufficient evidentiary basis for the Trial Chamber to conclude that Kubura had knowledge of the acts of plunder in Vareš, it was reasonable for it to conclude that his knowledge as regards the acts of wanton destruction was not established beyond reasonable doubt.

In light of the foregoing, the Appeals Chamber finds that the Prosecution failed to establish that no reasonable trier of fact could have concluded, on the basis of all the admitted evidence, that Kubura’s knowledge as regards the acts of wanton destruction was not established beyond reasonable doubt.

For the foregoing reasons, THE APPEALS CHAMBER
PURSUANT TO Article 25 of the Statute and Rules 117 and 118 of the Rules;
NOTING the respective written submissions of the Parties and the arguments they presented at the hearings of 4 and 5 December 2007;
SITTING in open session, unanimously:
ALLOWS Hadžihasanović’s appeal, in part, with respect to Ground 3; REVERSES his conviction for failing to take the necessary and reasonable measures to punish those responsible for the murder of Mladen Havranek (Count 3 of the Indictment) and the cruel treatment of six prisoners at the Stavanića Furniture Salon on 5 August 1993 (Count 4 of the Disposition of the Trial Judgement concerning the temporal scope of the cruel treatment at the Zenica Music School to render it consistent with the Trial Chamber’s findings. As regards the impact of this shorter period of responsibility on Hadžihasanović’s sentence, the Appeals Chamber first recalls that the Trial Chamber, in its sentencing determination, correctly determined that the cruel treatment at the Zenica Music School took place over approximately seven months and not nine months as erroneously indicated in the Disposition of the Trial Judgement. The Appeals Chamber further notes that the Trial Chamber’s finding regarding the large number of victims involved in the detention facilities in Zenica, which was considered an aggravating circumstance, remains valid for the relevant period. Thus, these factors remain unaffected by the above correction to the Disposition of the Trial Judgement and there is no impact on the sentence.

For the reasons set out in the Judgement, the Appeals Chamber dismisses the Prosecution’s and Kubura’s arguments. The Appeals Chamber finds that the Trial Chamber properly considered the gravity of the crimes, the relevant aggravating and mitigating factors, and the sentencing practices in the former Yugoslavia.

I will now read out in full the operative paragraphs of the Appeals Chamber’s Judgement, that is, the Disposition. Mr. Hadžihasanović and Mr. Kubura, will you please stand.

13. The Chamber recalls that in Rwanda a doctrine exists which allows multiple charges for the same act under certain circumstances.

14. The Defence

15. Musema was a member of the "conseil préfectorial" in Byumba Préfecture and a member of the Technical Committee in the Butare Commune. Both positions involved socio-economic and developmental matters and did not focus on préfectorial politics.

16. The Applicable Law

17. The Chamber, in its Judgement, considers these two sub-Articles.

18. Musema was a member of the "conseil préfectorial" in Byumba Préfecture and a member of the Technical Committee in the Butare Commune. Both positions involved socio-economic and developmental matters and did not focus on préfectorial politics.

19. In the alternative to Count 1, the Prosecutor, in Count 2, charges Musema with complicity in genocide. The Chamber finds that an accused cannot be convicted of both genocide and complicity in genocide for the same act. The Chamber adheres to the definition of complicity in genocide in the Akayesu Judgement.

20. Count 3 charges Musema with conspiracy to commit genocide under Article 2(3)(b) of the Statute. The Chamber defines conspiracy to commit genocide as an agreement between two or more persons to commit genocide.

21. Counts 4 to 7 charge Musema with crime against humanity under Article 3 of the Statute. The Chamber recalls the case law on this crime and discusses the elements required to establish the crime.

22. With respect to crime against humanity, Musema is indicted for murder, extermination, rape and other inhumane acts. The Chamber adopts the definitions of murder and extermination articulated in the Akayesu and Rutaganda Judgements. The Chamber also concurs with the definition of rape, as a crime against humanity, articulated in the Akayesu Judgement.

23. Finally, Counts 8 and 9 charge Musema under Article 4 of the Statute, with serious violations of Article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions and their Additional Protocol II thereto. Article 3 extends a minimum threshold of humanitarian protection to all persons affected by non-international conflicts.

24. The Chamber holds, firstly, that this protection is afforded throughout Rwanda, secondly, that the protection afforded extends to all civilians who do not take a direct part in the hostilities and, thirdly, that Musema, as a civilian, may be held responsible for serious violations of this kind.

25. The Chamber endorses the principle of cumulative charges. Multiple offences may be charged on the basis of the same acts, in order to capture the full text of the crimes committed by an accused. In this regard, the Chamber recalls that in Rwanda a doctrine exists which allows multiple charges for the same act under certain circumstances.

26. In the Judgement, the Chamber thoroughly discusses the defences presented by Musema. The Defence put particular emphasis on Musema's alibi, developing it in detail.
28. The Defence argued that the Prosecution did not discharge its burden of proving Musema guilty, that it did not prove that Musema participated in any of the attacks and that since the indictment contained multiple counts, it was necessary to prove Musema's participation in each count. The Chamber finds that the Prosecution did not discharge its burden of proving Musema guilty because it did not prove that he participated in the attacks.

29. In addition, the Defence argued that Musema had no case to answer on Counts 7, 8 and 9 of the Indictment, since the Indictment containing those counts was never served on him. The Chamber finds that Musema does have a case to answer on the Counts 7, 8, and 9, noting that Musema entered pleas of not guilty to these counts, establishing his knowledge and possession of the amended Indictment.

30. The Defence also argued that Musema's political activity was minimal and that no evidence was presented with respect to his alleged influence, importance or civic authority. It was the Defence's position that Musema was not part of the interim government, politically or in any other manner. The Chamber finds that the evidence presented does not support this argument.

31. Finally, the Defence argued against the reliability of the evidence presented by the Prosecution, alleging that the evidence was unreliable and that the evidence presented was not sufficient to prove Musema guilty.

32. In Section 5.1 of the Judgement, with respect to the events alleged in paragraphs 4.1, 4.2 and 4.3 of the Indictment, the Chamber finds that the evidence presented is not sufficient to prove that Musema was present at the meeting on Karongi hill on 18 April 1994.

33. In Section 5.2 of the Judgement, with respect to the events alleged in paragraphs 4.4 and 4.5 of the Indictment, the Chamber finds that the evidence presented is not sufficient to prove that Musema participated in the attack on Biyiniro hill on 31 May 1994.

34. With regard to the alleged attacks of 22 June 1994, 5 June 1994, 13 July 1994, 12 August 1994 and 15 April 1994, the Chamber finds that the evidence presented is not sufficient to prove that Musema participated in these attacks.

35. With regard to the alleged attack of 26 April 1994, the Chamber finds that the evidence presented is not sufficient to prove that Musema participated in this attack.

36. With regard to the alleged attacks of 31 May 1994 and 13 May 1994, the Chamber finds that the evidence presented is not sufficient to prove that Musema participated in these attacks.

37. With regard to the alleged attack of 22 June 1994, the Chamber finds that the evidence presented is not sufficient to prove that Musema participated in this attack.

38. With regard to the alleged attacks of 5 June 1994 and 13 July 1994, the Chamber finds that the evidence presented is not sufficient to prove that Musema participated in these attacks.

39. With regard to the alleged attack of 12 August 1994, the Chamber finds that the evidence presented is not sufficient to prove that Musema participated in this attack.

40. With regard to the alleged attack of 15 April 1994, the Chamber finds that the evidence presented is not sufficient to prove that Musema participated in this attack.

41. With regard to the alleged attack of 26 April 1994, the Chamber finds that the evidence presented is not sufficient to prove that Musema participated in this attack.

42. With regard to the alleged attack of 31 May 1994, the Chamber finds that the evidence presented is not sufficient to prove that Musema participated in this attack.

43. With regard to the alleged attack of 13 May 1994, the Chamber finds that the evidence presented is not sufficient to prove that Musema participated in this attack.

44. With regard to the alleged attack of 22 June 1994, the Chamber finds that the evidence presented is not sufficient to prove that Musema participated in this attack.

45. With regard to the alleged attack of 5 June 1994, the Chamber finds that the evidence presented is not sufficient to prove that Musema participated in this attack.

46. With regard to the alleged attack of 13 July 1994, the Chamber finds that the evidence presented is not sufficient to prove that Musema participated in this attack.

47. With regard to the alleged attack of 12 August 1994, the Chamber finds that the evidence presented is not sufficient to prove that Musema participated in this attack.

48. With regard to the alleged attack of 15 April 1994, the Chamber finds that the evidence presented is not sufficient to prove that Musema participated in this attack.

49. With regard to the alleged attack of 26 April 1994, the Chamber finds that the evidence presented is not sufficient to prove that Musema participated in this attack.

50. With regard to the alleged attack of 31 May 1994, the Chamber finds that the evidence presented is not sufficient to prove that Musema participated in this attack.

51. With regard to the alleged attack of 13 May 1994, the Chamber finds that the evidence presented is not sufficient to prove that Musema participated in this attack.

52. With regard to the alleged attack of 22 June 1994, the Chamber finds that the evidence presented is not sufficient to prove that Musema participated in this attack.

53. With regard to the alleged attack of 5 June 1994, the Chamber finds that the evidence presented is not sufficient to prove that Musema participated in this attack.

54. With regard to the alleged attack of 13 July 1994, the Chamber finds that the evidence presented is not sufficient to prove that Musema participated in this attack.

55. With regard to the alleged attack of 12 August 1994, the Chamber finds that the evidence presented is not sufficient to prove that Musema participated in this attack.

56. With regard to the alleged attack of 15 April 1994, the Chamber finds that the evidence presented is not sufficient to prove that Musema participated in this attack.

57. With regard to the alleged attack of 26 April 1994, the Chamber finds that the evidence presented is not sufficient to prove that Musema participated in this attack.

58. With regard to the alleged attack of 31 May 1994, the Chamber finds that the evidence presented is not sufficient to prove that Musema participated in this attack.

59. With regard to the alleged attack of 13 May 1994, the Chamber finds that the evidence presented is not sufficient to prove that Musema participated in this attack.
criminal acts against members of the Tutsi group. The Chamber finds that anti-Tutsi slogans made during the rape of a woman called Nyiramusugi on 13 May 1994 attacks, and humiliating utterances made during acts of serious bodily and mental harm, including rape and other acts of sexual violence, demonstrate that the objective of Musema and other attackers was to destroy the constituent elements of genocide, specifically, the Tutsi group and, therefore, the Tutsi group constitutes a protected group within the meaning of the Genocide Convention and Article 2 of the Statute. Thus, Musema incurs individual criminal responsibility under Article 6(3) of the Statute for genocide, punishable under Article 30(3)(b) of the Statute.

61. Thus, the Chamber finds that, specifically, Musema incurs individual criminal responsibility for these acts which are defined as acts committed with genocide as an aim and with the intent to destroy, in whole or in part, a protected group or groups within the meaning of the Genocide Convention and Article 2 of the Statute. Thus, Musema incurs individual criminal responsibility under Article 6(3) of the Statute for genocide, punishable under Article 30(3)(b) of the Statute.

62. Considering that the Chamber finds that these acts constitute genocide, as charged in Count 2, the Chamber does not consider whether these acts constitute complicity in genocide as charged in Count 2.

63. In Section 6.6 of the Judgement, the Chamber considers Count 3 of the Indictment, which charges Musema with complicity in genocide, punishable under Article 30(3)(b) of the Statute.

64. The Chamber holds that complicity in genocide is defined as an agreement between two or more persons to commit genocide. The Chamber concludes that there is no evidence that Musema conspired with others to commit genocide. Therefore, the Chamber finds that Musema does not incur criminal responsibility for the crime of complicity in genocide.

65. Furthermore, the alleged facts on which the Prosecutor based the count of complicity in genocide, as charged in Count 3, are the same as those adduced by the Prosecutor to establish Musema's participation in the commission of genocide, as charged in Count 1. Therefore, the Chamber finds that Musema does not incur criminal responsibility for this count.

66. Therefore, the Chamber finds that Musema incurs individual criminal responsibility for the crime of complicity in genocide.

67. In Section 6.3 of the Judgement, the Chamber considers Count 5 of the Indictment which charges Musema with crime against humanity (extermination), pursuant to Article 2(3)(a) of the Statute.

68. The Chamber finds that Musema incurs individual criminal responsibility under Article 6(1) of the Statute for having ordered, and by his presence and participation, aided and abetted in the murder of members of the Tutsi ethnic group and the causing of serious bodily and mental harm to a member of the Tutsi group, and for having committed murder and other crimes against humanity, pursuant to Article 2(3)(a) of the Statute.

69. The Chamber finds that Musema had knowledge of a widespread or systematic attack against the civilian population in Rwanda in 1994 and that his participation in the events in which he has been found to have participated was consistent with the pattern of this attack and formed part of this attack.

70. The Chamber finds that Musema, as a member of the Gisozi Factory, was also charged with complicity in the crime of extermination. The Chamber finds that Musema incurs individual criminal responsibility under Article 6(3) of the Statute for these acts.

71. Additionally, the Chamber finds that at the time of the events alleged in the Indictment, which charges Musema with crime against humanity (extermination) under Article 6(3) of the Statute, Musema, as a member of the Gisozi Factory, was also charged with complicity in the crime of genocide. The Chamber finds that Musema incurs individual criminal responsibility under Article 6(3) of the Statute for these acts.

72. In Section 6.6 of the Judgement, the Chamber considers Count 4 of the Indictment which charges Musema with the crime of murder, as defined in Article 2(4) of the Statute.

73. The Chamber finds that Musema was charged with murder, as defined in Article 2(4) of the Statute, and that Musema incurs individual criminal responsibility under Article 6(1) of the Statute for the acts alleged in the Indictment, pursuant to Article 2(4) of the Statute.
74. The Chamber concurs with the reasoning in the Akayesu Judgement that it is acceptable to convict an accused of two offences in relation to the same set of facts where: the offences have different elements; the provisions creating the offences protect different interests; or it is necessary to record a conviction for both offences in order to describe fully what the accused did. However the Chamber finds that it cannot convict an accused of two offences in relation to the same facts where one offence is a lesser and included offence of the other.

75. The Chamber finds that Musema cannot be held criminally responsible for both crime against humanity (murder) and crime against humanity (extermination), for the same acts, on the basis that murder and extermination, as crimes against humanity, share the same constituent elements of the offence.

76. The Chamber finds that the killings at Gitwa hill, Muyina hill, Rwirambo hill, Mumataba hill and the yakavumu cave represent killings of a collective group of individuals, hence they constitute extermination and not murder. Therefore, Musema is not individually criminally responsible for crime against humanity (murder) in respect of these killings.

77. In Section 6.5 of the Judgement, the Chamber reviews the allegations of crime against humanity (other inhumane acts), pursuant to Articles 3(g), 6(1) and 6(3) of the Statute, as set out in Count 6 of the Indictment. The Chamber finds that the Prosecutor has failed to specify which acts constitute this offence and to prove the relevant allegations beyond reasonable doubt.

78. In Section 6.6 of the Judgement, the Chamber reviews the allegations of crime against humanity (rape), pursuant to Articles 3(g), 6(1) and 6(3) of the Statute, as set out in Count 7 of the Indictment.

79. The Chamber has found that on 13 May 1994, Musema raped Nyiramasugi. Based on the finding of Musema's knowledge of a widespread or systematic attack on the civilian population and the finding that his participation was consistent with the pattern of this attack and formed part of the attack, the Chamber finds Musema individually criminally responsible for crime against humanity (rape), pursuant to Articles 3(g) and 6(1) of the Statute. However, the Chamber finds that the Prosecutor has failed to establish beyond reasonable doubt the individual criminal responsibility of Musema pursuant to Article 6(3) of the Statute.

80. In Section 6.7 of the Judgement, with respect to Counts 8 and 9 alleging serious violations of Common Article 3 to the Geneva Conventions and the Additional Protocol II thereto, the Chamber finds that the Prosecutor failed to establish the existence of a nexus between the acts for which Musema is individually criminally responsible under Articles 6(1) and 6(3) and the internal armed conflict. Consequently, the Chamber finds Musema not guilty of serious violations of Common Article 3.

Verdict

Count 1: Guilty of Genocide

Count 2: Not Guilty of Complicity in Genocide

Sentence

81. Regarding sentencing, the Chamber summarizes the legal provisions relating to sentences and penalties and their enforcement, and discusses the scale of sentences and general principles applicable in the determination of penalties. The Chamber also reviews the submissions of the parties concerning the determination of the sentence.

82. The Prosecutor submitted a number of aggravating circumstances to be taken into account.

83. The Prosecutor asked for a separate sentence for each of the counts on which Musema is found guilty in order to fully recognize the severity of each crime and Musema's particular role in its commission. The Prosecutor recommended life imprisonment for each count on which Musema is convicted.

84. The Defence submitted that the Prosecutor failed to prove Musema's guilt and that Musema should be found not guilty and released. In the alternative, the Defence submitted certain mitigating circumstances in the event that he is found guilty of any of the alleged crimes.

85. The Chamber, with respect to aggravating circumstances, considers the following:

(i) The offences of which Musema is guilty are extremely serious, as the Chamber pointed out when it described genocide as the "crime of crimes".

(ii) Musema led attackers who killed a large number of Tutsi refugees in the Bisesero region in mid-May 1994, including on 13 and 14 May 1994. Musema was armed with a rifle and used the weapon during the attacks. He took no steps to prevent the participation of tea factory employees or the use of its vehicles in the attacks. Moreover, Musema raped a young Tutsi woman and by his example encouraged others to rape her.

(iii) Musema did nothing to prevent the commission of the crimes and he took no steps to punish the perpetrators over whom he had control. Musema had the power enabling him to remove, or threaten to remove, an individual from his or her position at the Gisovu Tea Factory if he or she were a perpetrator of crimes punishable under the Statute.

86. With respect to mitigating circumstances, the Chamber considered that Musema admitted that a genocide occurred against the Tutsi people in Rwanda in 1994, expressed his distress about the deaths of so many innocent people, paid tribute to all victims of the tragic events in Rwanda and expressed regret that the Gisovu Tea Factory facilities may have been used by the perpetrators of atrocities. Additionally, Musema's co-operation, through his admission of facts, continued during the trial and facilitated expeditious proceedings.

87. Having reviewed all the circumstances of the case, the Chamber concludes that the aggravating factors outweigh the mitigating factors, especially as Musema personally led attackers to attack large numbers of Tutsi refugees and raped a young Tutsi woman. He knowingly and consciously participated in the commission of crimes and never showed remorse for his personal role in the commission of the atrocities.

TRIAL CHAMBER I

OTING the closing briefs submitted by the Prosecutor and the Defence; and HAVING HEARD the Prosecutor and the Defence;

IN PUNISHMENT OF THE ABOVE-MENTIONED CRIMES,

FOR ALL THE COUNTS ON WHICH HE HAS BEEN FOUND GUILTY;

RULES that imprisonment shall be served in a State designated by the President of the Tribunal in consultation with the Trial Chamber, and that the Government of Rwanda and the Government of the designated State shall be notified of such designation by the Registrar;

(i) Until his transfer to the designated place of imprisonment, Musema shall be kept in detention under the present conditions;

(ii) Upon notice of appeal, if any, the enforcement of the sentence shall be stayed until a decision has been rendered on the appeal, with the convicted person nevertheless remaining in detention.

88. The Judgement was signed in Arusha, on the 27th day of January 2000, by the three Judges.

89. Judge Aspegren and Judge Pillay attach their separate opinions to the Judgement.

Separate Opinion of Judge Aspegren

90. In a separate opinion, Judge Aspegren expresses his dissent from the majority concerning certain events during 1994 in respect of which he remains unconvinced that Musema participated, as alleged.

91. Judge Aspegren concurs with all the Chamber's factual findings except those made in Section 5.2 of the Judgement with regard to the alleged events of 26 April at Gitwa hill, 27 April to 3 May at Rwirambo hill, and the end of May at Nyakavumu cave, and the findings made in Section 5.3 with regard to the alleged events of 14 April 1994. Judge Aspegren remains unconvinced that it has been established beyond reasonable doubt that Musema participated in the events as alleged.

92. With respect to 26 April 1994, Gitwa hill, Judge Aspegren finds that Musema's alibi casts reasonable doubt on the allegation that Musema was involved in this attack.

93. In respect of 27 April to 3 May 1994, Rwirambo hill, Judge Aspegren finds that the evidence that the Prosecutor presented to show that Musema participated in the attack is unreliable due to material contradictions in the testimony of the sole witness. Judge Aspegren finds these contradictions to be serious enough to cast doubt on its credibility. Thus he finds that it has not been established beyond reasonable doubt that Musema participated in the alleged attack on Rwirambo hill.

94. With respect to the alleged attack at the end of May 1994 at Nyakavumu cave, Judge Aspegren finds that doubt remains in the matter as it cannot be adduced from the evidence when the attack occurred. Moreover, an inability to specify the date of the attack does not allow Musema to fully answer the relevant charges against him. Therefore Judge Aspegren finds that Musema's participation in the attack is not proved beyond reasonable doubt.

95. With respect to the alleged rape of Anunciata Mujawanyezi, Judge Aspegren is not convinced beyond reasonable doubt that Musema ordered or encouraged the rape.

96. Regarding the legal findings (Section 6 of the Judgement), Judge Aspegren, concurs to the extent that they pertain to acts other than these events. Being overruled concerning Musema's ordering of the rape, he joins the majority in its legal finding that the order, as such, is not punishable.

97. Judge Aspegren agrees with the majority's findings of guilt to the extent that they pertain to the acts other than those above. Being partially overruled as to the factual and legal findings, he concurs with the verdict (Section 7) and the sentence (Section 8).

Separate Opinion of Judge Pillay

98. In her separate opinion, Judge Pillay expresses her dissent from the majority solely with respect to a number of factual findings in Sections 5.2 and 5.3 of the Judgement.

99. With respect to the alibi presented by Musema, Judge Pillay assesses the evidence presented in support of the alibi as a whole, rather than day by day. Judge Pillay reviews the evidence given by the Prosecution witnesses and the evidence presented by the Defence and evaluates its credibility, as well as the credibility of the alibi, generally. Judge Pillay notes that the testimony of Musema's wife does not specifically corroborate his account of his whereabouts. Finally she questions the probative value, and in some cases, the authenticity, of documents produced in support of the alibi. In light of the evidence presented by the Prosecutor with respect to Musema's whereabouts, she rejects Musema's alibi.

100. With respect to 18 April, Karongi hill, Judge Pillay finds that Musema's alibi does not stand, and thus she finds that it has been proved beyond reasonable doubt that Musema took part in the meeting and the attack, at which he encouraged the rape of Tutsi women, as alleged. Judge Pillay holds that these findings should be considered as cumulative evidence when assessing culpability for genocide and crime against humanity (extermination and rape).

101. With respect to 31 May, Byintiro hill, 5 June near Musira hill and 22 June at Nyarutovu cellule, Judge Pillay concurs with the findings of the majority, but for different reasons. She finds reasonable doubt in the evidence presented by the Prosecutor but this doubt has not been created by the defence of alibi.

102. On all other issues in the Judgement, including the verdict and sentence, Judge Pillay is in agreement with the majority.

No. ICC-01/04-01/06 2/17 14 March 2012
Trial Chamber I ("Trial Chamber" or "Chamber") of the International Criminal Court ("Court" or "ICC"), in the case of Prosecutor v. Thomas Lubanga Dyilo ("Lubanga case"), issues the following Summary of the "Judgment pursuant to Article 74 of the Statute":

A. Introduction

1. This is the summary of the Chamber’s Judgment under Article 74 of the Rome Statute as to whether the Prosecutor has proved the guilt of the accused.

B. Charges against the accused

2. On 29 January 2007 the Pre-Trial Chamber issued its Decision on the Confirmation of Charges. The Pre-Trial Chamber confirmed that there was sufficient evidence to establish substantial grounds to believe that:

   Thomas Lubanga Dyilo is responsible, as co-perpetrator, for the charges of enlisting and conscripting children under the age of fifteen years into the FPLC and using them to participate actively in hostilities within the meaning of articles 8(2)(b)(xvi) and 25(3)(a) of the Statute from early September 2002 to 2 June 2003.

   Additionally, the Pre-Trial Chamber confirmed that there was sufficient evidence to establish substantial grounds to believe that:

   Thomas Lubanga Dyilo is responsible, as co-perpetrator, for the charges of enlisting and conscripting children under the age of fifteen years into the FPLC and using them to participate actively in hostilities within the meaning of articles 8(2)(b)(vii) and 25(3)(a) of the Statute from 2 June to 13 August 2003.

C. Jurisdiction

3. Pursuant to Article 19 of the Statute, the "Court shall satisfy itself that it has jurisdiction in any case brought before it." The Democratic Republic of the Congo ("DRC") became a State party on 11 April 2002 and, pursuant to Article 14 of the Statute, President Kabila referred the situation in the DRC to the Prosecutor in March 2004. Pre-Trial Chamber I concluded that the case falls within the Court’s jurisdiction, and the Appeals Chamber confirmed the Pre-Trial Chamber’s Decision on the accused’s challenge to the jurisdiction of the Court. The personal, temporal, territorial and subject-matter elements that are relevant to the Court’s jurisdiction have not altered since the Decision on the Confirmation of the Charges, and the issue has not been raised by the parties or any State before the Trial Chamber.

D. Brief case history

4. The first status conference before the Trial Chamber was held on 4 September 2007, and thereafter there were 54 status conferences prior to the commencement of the trial. The following is a summary of the main procedural events which had a significant impact on the course of the proceedings.

5. The trial was stayed twice as a consequence of disclosure issues. The first stay was imposed by the Chamber on 13 June 2008, and it was lifted on 18 November 2008. A second stay was imposed on 8 July 2010. The presentation of evidence resumed on 25 October 2010.

7. On 3 September 2009, the Chamber adjourned the presentation of evidence pending an interlocutory appeal. The Appeals Chamber issued its judgment on the matter on 8 December 2009 and the evidence resumed on 7 January 2010.

8. The defence presented a bifurcated case. In the first part the defence in essence called into question the testimony of all the prosecution’s child soldier witnesses, a process that included the presentation of rebuttal witnesses by the prosecution. On 10 December 2010, the defence filed an application seeking a permanent stay of the proceedings. The Chamber issued a Decision dismissing the defence application on 23 February 2011.

9. The second part of the defence evidence was introduced thereafter and on 20 May 2011 the presentation of evidence formally closed.

10. The Trial Chamber heard 67 witnesses, and there were 204 days of hearings. The prosecution called 36 witnesses, including 3 experts, and the defence called 24 witnesses. Three victims were called as witnesses following a request from their legal representatives. Additionally, the Chamber called four experts. The prosecution submitted 368 items of evidence, the defence 992, and the legal representatives 13 (1373 in total). In addition to the written submissions, the oral closing arguments of the parties and participants were heard on 25 and 26 August 2011. Since 6 June 2007, when the record of the case was transmitted to the Trial Chamber, the Chamber has delivered 273 written decisions and orders and 347 oral decisions.

11. In accordance with Article 68(3) of the Statute, victims have participated in the case, and in particular they have applied to introduce evidence, they have questioned witnesses and they have advanced written and oral submissions with the leave of the Chamber and with the assistance of their legal representatives. The total number of individual victims authorised to participate in the proceedings is 129 (34 female and 95 male victims).

12. At the request of the accused and in accordance with Article 76(2) of the Statute, the Chamber in an oral Decision ruled that there would be a separate sentencing hearing if the accused is convicted.

E. Factual overview

13. The Trial Chamber heard the testimony of several expert witnesses and it reviewed documentary evidence that relates to the existence of an inter-ethnic conflict in Ituri between 1999 and 2003.

14. Against this background, the Union des Patriotes Congolais ("UPC") was created on 15 September 2000. Although Thomas Lubanga was one of the UPC’s founding members and its President from the outset, the nature of the group when it was created is a matter of dispute in this case. These topics are analysed in greater detail below when the Chamber deals with the individual criminal responsibility of the accused.

15. The UPC and its military wing, the Force Patriotique pour la Libération du Congo (“FPLC”), took power in Ituri in September 2002.

F. The Burden and Standard of Proof

16. Under Article 66 of the Statute, the accused is presumed to be innocent until the Prosecutor has proved his guilt. For a conviction, each element of the crime charged must be established “beyond reasonable doubt”.

G. Intermediaries

17. An issue that occupied the Chamber for a significant part of this trial concerned the use by the prosecution of local intermediaries in the DRC. The Chamber is of the view that the prosecution should not have delegated its investigative responsibilities to the intermediaries as analysed in the judgment, notwithstanding the extensive security difficulties that it faced. A series of witnesses have been called during this trial whose evidence, as a result of the essentially unsupervised actions of three of the principal intermediaries, cannot safely be relied on.

18. The Chamber spent a considerable period of time investigating the circumstances of a substantial number of individuals whose evidence was, at least in part, inaccurate or dishonest. The prosecution’s negligence in failing to verify and scrutinise this material sufficiently before it was introduced led to significant expenditure on the part of the Court. An additional consequence of the lack of proper oversight of the intermediaries is that they were potentially able to take advantage of the witnesses they contacted. Irrespective of the Chamber’s conclusions regarding the credibility and reliability of the alleged former child soldier witnesses, given their youth and likely exposure to conflict, they were vulnerable to manipulation.

19. The Chamber has withdrawn the right of six dual status witnesses to participate in the proceedings, as a result of the Chamber’s conclusions as to the reliability and accuracy of these witnesses.

20. Likewise, the Chamber has not relied on the testimony of the three victims who testified in Court (a/0225/06, a/0229/06, and a/0270/07), because their accounts are unreliable. Given the material doubts that exist as to the identities of two of these individuals, which inevitably affect the evidence of the third, the Chamber decided to withdraw the permission originally granted to them to participate as victims.

21. The Chamber has concluded that there is a risk that intermediaries P-0143, P-316 and P-321 persuaded, encouraged, or assisted witnesses to give false evidence. These individuals may have committed crimes under Article 70 of the Statute. Pursuant to Rule 165 of the Rules, the responsibility to initiate and conduct investigations in these circumstances lies with the prosecution. Investigations can be initiated on the basis of information communicated by a Chamber or any reliable source. The Chamber communicates the relevant information to the OTP, and the Prosecutor should ensure that the risk of a conflict of interest is avoided for the purposes of any investigation.

H. Armed conflict and its nature

22. Although the Pre-Trial Chamber in its Confirmation of Charges Decision determined that for part of the relevant period the conflict was international in character, the Chamber concludes that the UPC/FPLC, as an organised armed group, was involved in an internal armed conflict against the Armée Populaire Congolaise ("APC") and other Lendu militias, including the Force de Résistance Patriotique en Ituri ("FRPI"), between September 2002 and 13 August 2003. Accordingly, applying Regulation 55 of the Regulations of the Court, the Chamber has changed the legal characterisation of the facts to the extent that the armed conflict relevant to the charges was non-international in character.

I. Legal definition of conscription, enlistment and use

23. The charges against the accused include three distinct criminal acts. The Chamber has concluded that the crimes of conscription and enlistment are committed at the moment a child under the age of 15 is enrolled into or joins an armed force or group, with or without compulsion. These offences are continuous in nature. They end only when the child reaches 15 years of age or leaves the force or group.

24. As regards the offence of using children under the age of 15 to participate actively in hostilities, the Chamber has concluded that this includes a wide range of activities, from those children on the front line (who participate directly) through to the boys or girls who are involved in a myriad of roles that support the combatants. All of these activities, which cover either direct or indirect participation, have an underlying common feature: the child concerned is, at the very least, a potential target. The decisive factor, therefore, in deciding if an “indirect” role is to be treated as active participation in hostilities is whether the support provided by the child to the combatants exposed him or her to real danger as a potential target. In the judgment of the Chamber these combined factors – the child’s support and this level of consequential risk – mean that although absent from the immediate scene of the hostilities, the individual was nonetheless actively involved in them.

J. The facts relating to the conscription and enlistment of children under the age of 15 and using them to participate actively in the hostilities

25. It is alleged that the accused, jointly with others, conscripted and enlisted children under the age of 15 years into the armed group of the UPC/FPLC and that he used them to participate actively in hostilities between 1 September 2002 and 13 August 2003.

26. The Chamber has concluded that the UPC/FPLC was an armed group.

27. The Chamber finds that between 1 September 2002 and 13 August 2003, the armed wing of the UPC/FPLC was responsible for the widespread recruitment of young people, including children under the age of 15, on an enforced as well as a “voluntary” basis.
28. Multiple witnesses testified credibly and reliably that children under 15 were “voluntarily” or forcibly recruited into the UPC/FPLC and sent to either the headquarters of the UPC/FPLC in Bunia or its military training camps, including at Rwamara, Mandro, and Mongbwalu. Video evidence clearly shows recruits under the age of 15 in the Rwamara camp.

29. The evidence demonstrates that children in the military camps endured harsh training regimes and were subjected to a variety of severe punishments. The evidence also establishes that children, mainly girls, were used by UPC/FPLC commanders to carry out domestic work. The Trial Chamber heard evidence from witnesses that girl soldiers were subjected to sexual violence and rape. Witnesses specifically referred to girls under the age of 15 who were subjected to sexual violence by UPC/FPLC commanders. Sexual violence does not form part of the charges against the accused, and the Chamber has not made any findings of fact on the issue, particularly as to whether responsibility is to be attributed to the accused.

30. The evidence has established beyond reasonable doubt that children under the age of 15 were conscripted and enlisted into the UPC/FPLC forces between 1 September 2002 and 13 August 2003.

31. The testimony of multiple witnesses and the documentary evidence have demonstrated that children under the age of 15 were within the ranks of the UPC/FPLC between 1 September 2002 and 13 August 2003. The evidence proves that children were deployed as soldiers in Bunia, Tchomia, Kasenyi, Bogoro and elsewhere, and they took part in fighting, including at Kobu, Songolo and Mongbwalu. It has been established that the UPC/FPLC used children under the age of 15 as military guards. The evidence reveals that a special “Kadogo Unit” was formed, which was comprised principally of children under the age of 15. The evidence of various witnesses, as well as video footage, demonstrates that commanders in the UPC/FPLC frequently used children under the age of 15 as bodyguards. The accounts of several witnesses, along with the video evidence, clearly prove that children under the age of 15 acted as bodyguards or served within the presidential guard of Mr Lubanga.

32. In all the circumstances, the evidence has established beyond reasonable doubt that children under the age of 15 were used by the UPC/FPLC to participate actively in hostilities between 1 September 2002 and 13 August 2003.

K. Legal analysis of Articles 25(3)(a) and 30 of the Statute

33. The Chamber has concluded that pursuant to Articles 25(3)(a) and 30 of the Statute, the prosecution must prove in relation to each charge that:

(i) there was an agreement or common plan between the accused and at least one other co-perpetrator that, once implemented, will result in the commission of the relevant crime in the ordinary course of events;

(ii) the accused provided an essential contribution to the common plan that resulted in the commission of the relevant crime;

(iii) the accused meant to conscript, enlist or use children under the age of 15 to participate actively in hostilities or he was aware that by implementing the common plan these consequences “will occur in the ordinary course of events”;
(iv) the accused was aware that he provided an essential contribution to the implementation of the common plan; and
(v) the accused was aware of the factual circumstances that established the existence of an armed conflict and the link between these circumstances and his conduct.

L. The facts relating to the individual criminal responsibility of Mr Thomas Lubanga

34. The evidence has confirmed that the accused and his co-perpetrators agreed to, and participated in, a common plan to build an army for the purpose of establishing and maintaining political and military control over Ituri. In the ordinary course of events, this resulted in the conscription and enlistment of boys and girls under the age of 15, and their use to participate actively in hostilities.

35. The Chamber has concluded that from late 2000 onwards Thomas Lubanga acted with his co-perpetrators, who included Floribert Kismbo, Bosco Ntaganda, Chief Kahwa, and commanders Tchaligonza, Baganza and Kasangaki. Mr Lubanga’s involvement with the soldiers (including young children) who were sent to Uganda for training is of significance. Although these events fall outside the period covered by the charges and are outwith the temporal jurisdiction of the Court, they provide evidence on the activities of this group, and they help establish the existence of the common plan before and throughout the period of the charges.

36. The accused was in conflict with Mr Mbusa Nyamwisi and the Rassemblement Congolais pour la Démocratie - Mouvement de Libération (“RCD-ML”) from at least April 2002, and he led a group that sought to bring about political change in Ituri, including the removal of Mr Mbusa Nyamwisi by force, if necessary. The accused remained in control, by delegated authority, whilst he was detained during the summer of 2002 and he sent Chief Kahwa and Mr Beiza to Rwanda to obtain arms. During that period, Floribert Kismbo, Bosco Ntaganda and Chief Kahwa, three of the accused’s principal alleged co-perpetrators, were generally responsible for recruitment and training, which included girls and boys under the age of 15.

37. The accused and at least some of his co-perpetrators were involved in the takeover of Bunia in August 2002. Thomas Lubanga, as the highest authority within the UPC/FPLC, appointed Chief Kahwa, Floribert Kismbo and Bosco Ntaganda to senior positions within the UPC/FPLC. The evidence has established that during this period, the leaders of the UPC/FPLC, including Chief Kahwa, and Bosco Ntaganda, and Hema elders such as Eloy Mafuta, were active in mobilisation drives and recruitment campaigns in order to persuade Hema families to send their children to join the UPC/FPLC. Those children recruited before the formal creation of the FPLC were incorporated into that group and a number of military training camps were added to the original facility at Mandro. The Chamber has concluded that between 1 September 2002 and 13 August 2003, a significant number of high-ranking members of the UPC/FPLC and other personnel conducted a large-scale recruitment exercise directed at young people, including children under the age of 15, on both voluntary and coercive bases.

38. The Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that as a result of the implementation of the common plan to build an army for the purpose of establishing and maintaining political and military control over Ituri, boys and girls under the age of 15 were conscripted and enlisted into the UPC/FPLC between 1 September 2002 and 13 August 2003. Similarly, the Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the UPC/FPLC used children under the age of 15 to participate actively in hostilities including during battles. They were used, during the relevant period, as soldiers and as bodyguards for senior officials including the accused.

39. Thomas Lubanga was the President of the UPC/FPLC, and the evidence demonstrates that he was simultaneously the Commander-in-Chief of the army and its political leader. He exercised an overall coordinating role as regards the activities of the UPC/FPLC. He was informed, on a substantive and continuous basis, of the operations of the FPLC. He was involved in the planning of military operations, and he played a critical role in providing logistical support, including providing weapons, ammunition, food, uniforms, military rations and other general supplies to the FPLC troops. He was closely involved in making decisions on recruitment policy and he actively supported recruitment initiatives, for instance by giving speeches to the local population and the recruits. In his speech at the Rwampana military camp, he encouraged children including those under the age of 15 years, to join the army and to provide security for the populace once deployed in the field after their military training. Furthermore, he personally used children below the age of 15 amongst his bodyguards and he regularly saw guards of other UPC/FPLC staff members who were below the age of 15. The Chamber has concluded that these contributions by Thomas Lubanga, taken together, were essential to a common plan that resulted in the conscription and enlistment of girls and boys below the age of 15 into the UPC/FPLC and their use to actively participate in hostilities.

40. The Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt, as set out above, that Thomas Lubanga acted with the intent and knowledge necessary to establish the charges (the mental element required by Article 30). He was aware of the factual circumstances that established the existence of the armed conflict. Furthermore, he was aware of the nexus between the said circumstances and his own conduct, which resulted in the conscription, enlistment and use of children below the age of 15 to participate actively in hostilities.

M. Conclusion of the Chamber

41. Although Judges Odio Benito and Fulford have written separate and dissenting opinions on particular discrete issues, the Chamber has reached its decision unanimously.

42. The Chamber concludes that the prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that Mr Thomas Lubanga Dyilo is guilty of the crimes of conscripting and enlisting children under the age of fifteen years into the FPLC and using them to participate actively in hostilities within the meaning of Articles 8(2)(c)(vii) and 25(3)(a) of the Statute from early September 2002 to 13 August 2003.

The Hague, 16 November 2012

Appeals Judgement Summary for Ante Gotovina and Mladen Markač

Please find below the summary of the Judgement read out today by Judge Meron.

As the Registrar announced, the case on our agenda today is Prosecutor v. Ante Gotovina and Mladen Markač. In accordance with the Scheduling Order issued on 2 November 2012, today the Appeals Chamber will deliver its judgement.

Following the practice of the Tribunal, I will not read out the text of the Appeal Judgement, except for the disposition, but instead will summarise the essential issues on appeal and the central findings of the Appeals Chamber. This oral summary does not constitute any part of the official and authoritative judgement of the Appeals Chamber, which is rendered in writing and will be distributed to the parties at the close of this hearing.

Background of the Case

This case concerns events that occurred from at least July 1995 to about 30 September 1995 in the Krajina region of Croatia. During this period, Croatian leaders and officials initiated “Operation Storm”, a military action aiming to take control of territory in the Krajina region.

During the period relevant to the Indictment, Mr. Gotovina was a Colonel General in the Croatian Army or “HV”, the commander of the HV’s Split Military District, and the overall operational commander of Operation Storm in the southern portion of the Krajina region. The Trial Chamber concluded that Mr. Gotovina shared the objective of and significantly contributed to a Joint Criminal Enterprise, or “JCE”, whose common purpose was to permanently remove the Serb civilian population from the Krajina region, by ordering unlawful artillery attacks on Knin, Benkovac, Obrovac, and Gračac, or the “Four Towns”, were not unlawful and that without a finding that the artillery attacks were unlawful, the Trial Chamber’s conclusion that a JCE existed cannot be sustained.

The Prosecution responds that the Trial Chamber did not err in finding either that unlawful artillery attacks against the Four Towns took place or that a JCE existed.

The Appeals Chamber recalls that the Trial Chamber concluded that the Appellants were members of a JCE whose common purpose was to permanently remove Serb civilians from the Krajina by force or threat of force. The Trial Chamber’s conclusion that a JCE existed was based on its overall assessment of several mutually-reinforcing findings. The Appeals Chamber, Judge Aguš and Judge Pocar dissenting, considers that the touchstone of the Trial Chamber’s analysis concerning the existence of a JCE was its of violations of the laws or customs of war. He was sentenced to 24 years of imprisonment.

During the period relevant to the Indictment, Mr. Markač was the Assistant Minister of the Interior and Operation Commander of the Special Police in Croatia. The Trial Chamber found that Mr. Markač shared the objective of and significantly contributed to a JCE, whose common purpose was to permanently remove the Serb civilian population from the Krajina region, by ordering an unlawful artillery attack on Gračac and by creating a climate of impunity through his failure to prevent, investigate, or punish crimes committed by members of the Special Police against Serb civilians. The Trial Chamber found Mr. Markač guilty, pursuant to the first and third forms of JCE, of crimes against humanity and violations of the laws or customs of war. He was sentenced to 18 years of imprisonment.

The Trial Chamber acquitted the third Accused, Ivan Čermak, of all charges against him.

Mr. Gotovina submitted four grounds of appeal and Mr. Markač submitted eight grounds of appeal. Both of the Appellants challenge their convictions in their entirety. Mr. Markač also challenges his sentence. The Appeals Chamber now turns to the Appellants’ contentions, addressing first their submissions regarding unlawful artillery attacks and the existence of a JCE.

Grounds of appeal

Unlawful Artillery Attacks and Existence of a JCE

Mr. Gotovina, in his First and Third Grounds of Appeal, and Mr. Markač, in his First and Second Grounds of Appeal, in part, submit that the artillery attacks on Knin, Benkovac, Obrovac, and Gračac, or the “Four Towns”, were not unlawful and that without a finding that the artillery attacks were unlawful, the Trial Chamber’s conclusion that a JCE existed cannot be sustained.

The Prosecution responds that the Trial Chamber did not err in finding either that unlawful artillery attacks against the Four Towns took place or that a JCE existed.

The Appeals Chamber recalls that the Trial Chamber concluded that the Appellants were members of a JCE whose common purpose was to permanently remove Serb civilians from the Krajina by force or threat of force. The Trial Chamber’s conclusion that a JCE existed was based on its overall assessment of several mutually-reinforcing findings. The Appeals Chamber, Judge Aguš and Judge Pocar dissenting, considers that the touchstone of the Trial Chamber’s analysis concerning the existence of a JCE was its conclusion that unlawful artillery attacks targeted civilians and civilian objects in the Four Towns, and that these unlawful attacks caused the deportation of large numbers of civilians from the Krajina region.

The Trial Chamber's finding that the artillery attacks on the Four Towns were unlawful was heavily premised on its analysis of individual impact sites within the Four Towns, which I will refer to as the "Impact Analysis". This Impact Analysis was in turn based on the Trial Chamber's finding a 200 metre range of error for artillery projectiles fired at the Four Towns, which I will refer to as the "200 Metre Standard". Based on this range of error, the Trial Chamber found that all impact sites located more than 200 metres from a target it deemed legitimate served as evidence of an unlawful artillery attack. In identifying legitimate targets, the Trial Chamber took into account, in part, its finding that the HV could not identify targets of opportunity, such as moving police or military vehicles, in the Four Towns.

The Appeals Chamber unanimously holds that the Trial Chamber erred in deriving the 200 Metre Standard. The Trial Judgement contains no indication that any evidence considered by the Trial Chamber suggested a 200 metre margin of error, and it is devoid of any specific reasoning as to how the Trial Chamber derived this margin of error. The Trial Chamber considered evidence from expert witnesses who testified as to factors, such as wind speed and air temperature, that could cause variations in the accuracy of the weapons used by the HV against the Four Towns, and the Trial Chamber explicitly noted that it had not received sufficient evidence to make findings about these factors with respect to each of the Four Towns. In its Impact Analysis, however, the Trial Chamber applied the 200 Metre Standard uniformly to all impact sites in each of the Four Towns.

In these circumstances, the Appeals Chamber is unanimous in finding that the Trial Chamber erred in adopting a margin of error that was not linked to the evidence it received.

With respect to targets of opportunity in the Four Towns, the Appeals Chamber holds that the Trial Chamber did not err in determining that the HV had no ability to strike targets of opportunity in the towns of Benkovac, Gračac, and Obrovac. However, the Appeals Chamber notes that the Trial Chamber was presented with, and did not clearly discount, evidence of targets of opportunity in the town of Knin. In this context, the Appeals Chamber, Judge Agius and Judge Pocar dissenting, holds that the Trial Chamber erred in concluding that attacks on Knin were not aimed at targets of opportunity.

The Appeals Chamber, Judge Agius and Judge Pocar dissenting, recalls that, while the Trial Chamber considered a number of factors in assessing whether particular shells were aimed at lawful military targets, the distance between a given impact site and the nearest identified artillery target was the cornerstone and organising principle of the Trial Chamber's Impact Analysis. The Appeals Chamber, Judge Agius and Judge Pocar dissenting, holds that the Trial Chamber's errors with respect to the 200 Metre Standard and targets of opportunity are sufficiently serious that the conclusions of the Impact Analysis cannot be sustained. Although the Trial Chamber considered additional evidence in finding that the attacks on the Four Towns were unlawful, the Appeals Chamber, Judge Agius and Judge Pocar dissenting, holds that, absent the Impact Analysis, this remaining evidence is insufficient to support a finding that the artillery attacks on the Four Towns were unlawful.

In view of the foregoing, the Appeals Chamber, Judge Agius and Judge Pocar dissenting, finds that no reasonable trial chamber could conclude beyond reasonable doubt that the Four Towns were subject to unlawful artillery attacks. Accordingly, the Appeals Chamber, Judge Agius and Judge Pocar dissenting, grants Mr. Gotovina's First Ground of Appeal, in part, and Mr. Markač's Second Ground of Appeal, in part, and reverses the Trial Chamber's finding that the artillery attacks on the Four Towns were unlawful.

With respect to liability via JCE, the Appeals Chamber observes that the Trial Chamber's conclusion that a JCE existed was based on its overall assessment of several mutually-reinforcing findings, but the Appeals Chamber, Judge Agius and Judge Pocar dissenting, considers that the Trial Chamber's findings on the JCE's core common purpose of forcibly removing Serb civilians from the Krajina rested primarily on the existence of unlawful artillery attacks against civilians and civilian objects in the Four Towns. While the Trial Chamber also considered evidence concerning the planning and aftermath of the artillery attacks to support its finding that a JCE existed, it explicitly considered this evidence in light of its conclusion that the attacks on the Four Towns were unlawful. Furthermore, the Trial Chamber did not find that either of the Appellants was directly implicated in Croatia's adoption of discriminatory policies.

In these circumstances, having reversed the Trial Chamber's finding that artillery attacks on the Four Towns were unlawful, the Appeals Chamber, Judge Agius and Judge Pocar dissenting, considers that no reasonable trial chamber could conclude that the only reasonable interpretation of the circumstantial evidence on the record was the existence of a JCE with the common purpose of permanently removing the Serb population from the Krajina by force or threat of force.

In view of the foregoing, the Appeals Chamber, Judge Agius and Judge Pocar dissenting, grants Mr. Gotovina's First and Third Grounds of Appeal and Mr. Markač's
First and Second Grounds of Appeal, in part, and reverses the Trial Chamber’s finding that a JCE existed to permanently remove the Serb civilian population from the Krajina by force or threat of force. It is therefore unnecessary to address the Appellants’ remaining contentions regarding the JCE’s existence. The Appeals Chamber notes that all of the Appellants’ convictions were entered pursuant to the mode of liability of JCE. All of the Appellants’ convictions are therefore reversed.

Convictions Under Alternate Modes of Liability

Having quashed, Judge Agius and Judge Pocar dissenting, the Appellants’ convictions, all of which were entered pursuant to the mode of liability of JCE, the Appeals Chamber now considers the submissions of the parties regarding the possibility of entering convictions under alternate modes of liability. The Appeals Chamber recalls that, in its Order for Additional Briefing of 20 July 2012, it determined that aiding and abetting and superior responsibility are the alternate modes of liability most relevant to the Trial Chamber’s findings.

The Appellants challenge the Appeals Chamber’s jurisdiction to enter convictions under alternate modes of liability, and assert that, in any event, the Prosecution waived its right to seek convictions under alternate modes of liability because it did not appeal the Trial Judgement.

The Appeals Chamber observes, Judge Pocar dissenting, that it has, on multiple occasions, entered convictions on the basis of alternate modes of liability. In this respect, the Appeals Chamber notes that Article 25(2) of the Statute, specifically the power it vests in the Appeals Chamber to “revise” a decision taken by a trial chamber, grants the Appeals Chamber’s authority to enter convictions on the basis of alternate modes of liability.

The Appeals Chamber, Judge Pocar dissenting, is not convinced that the Appellants have presented cogent reasons requiring departure from its practice of entering convictions on the basis of alternate forms of liability in certain circumstances. The Appeals Chamber notes, however, that it will not enter convictions under alternate modes of liability where this would substantially compromise the fair trial rights of appellants or exceed its jurisdiction as delineated in the Statute.

In considering whether to enter convictions pursuant to alternate modes of liability in this case, the Appeals Chamber will assess the Trial Chamber’s findings and other evidence on the record de novo. The Appeals Chamber recalls that the Trial Chamber’s analysis was focused on whether particular findings were sufficient to enter convictions pursuant to JCE as a mode of liability. Accordingly, the Appeals Chamber will consider, but will not defer to, the Trial Chamber’s relevant analysis.

Turning first to the Appellants’ liability for the artillery attacks on the Four Towns, the Appeals Chamber recalls that it has reversed, Judge Agius and Judge Pocar dissenting, the Trial Chamber’s finding that the artillery attacks on the Four Towns were unlawful. The Appeals Chamber recalls the Trial Chamber’s determination that in the context of the specific factual circumstances before it, it would not characterise civilian departures from towns and villages subject to lawful artillery attacks as deportation, nor could it find that those involved in launching lawful artillery attacks had the intent to forcibly displace civilians. In these factual circumstances, the Trial Chamber’s reasoning would preclude finding that departures from the Four Towns concurrent with lawful artillery attacks constituted deportation. Having assessed the evidence, the Appeals Chamber agrees with the relevant analysis of the Trial Chamber, and finds that in the factual context of this case, departures of civilians concurrent with lawful artillery attacks cannot be qualified as deportation.

The Appeals Chamber further observes that given its reversal of the finding that a JCE existed and absent a finding of unlawful attacks, the Trial Judgement does not include any explicit alternative findings setting out the requisite mens rea for deportation which could be ascribed to the Appellants on the basis of lawful artillery attacks. In these circumstances, the Appeals Chamber is not satisfied that the artillery attacks the Appellants were responsible for are sufficient to prove them guilty beyond reasonable doubt for deportation under any alternate mode of liability pled in the Indictment.

Turning to Mr. Gotovina’s potential responsibility under alternate modes of liability based on additional findings of the Trial Chamber, the Appeals Chamber recalls that, in addition to its findings regarding the artillery attacks on the Four Towns, the Trial Chamber found: that Mr. Gotovina was aware of crimes allegedly being committed in the Four Towns before and after the artillery attacks; that these crimes required investigation; and that Mr. Gotovina failed to follow up on the crimes. Moreover, the Trial Chamber specifically noted three “additional measures” that Mr. Gotovina could have taken, namely contacting and seeking assistance from “relevant people”; making public statements; and diverting “available capacities” towards following up on these crimes. The Trial Chamber concluded that Mr. Gotovina failed to make a serious effort to investigate the crimes and to prevent future crimes. The Appeals Chamber observes that the Trial Chamber relied on its finding of the unlawfulness of artillery attacks in assessing Mr. Gotovina’s responsibility for additional conduct and failure to act.
However, the Appeals Chamber, Judge Agius dissenting, considers that the Trial Chamber’s description of the additional measures that Mr. Gotovina should have taken was terse and vague, and it failed to specifically identify how these measures would have addressed Mr. Gotovina’s perceived shortcomings in following up on crimes. The Appeals Chamber recalls that the Trial Chamber explicitly considered evidence that Mr. Gotovina adopted numerous measures to prevent and minimise crimes and general disorder among the HV troops under his control. The Appeals Chamber further recalls that expert testimony at trial indicated that Mr. Gotovina took all necessary and reasonable measures to maintain order among his subordinates. In this context, the Appeals Chamber, Judge Agius dissenting, considers that the evidence on the record does not prove beyond reasonable doubt that any failure to act on Mr. Gotovina’s part was so extensive as to give rise to criminal liability pursuant to aiding and abetting or superior responsibility.

In this context, the Appeals Chamber, Judge Agius dissenting, can identify no remaining Trial Chamber findings that would constitute the actus reus supporting a conviction pursuant to an alternate mode of liability. Accordingly, the Appeals Chamber, Judge Agius dissenting, will not enter convictions against Mr. Gotovina on the basis of alternate modes of liability.

Turning to Mr. Markač’s potential responsibility under alternate modes of liability based on Trial Chamber findings which have not been reversed, the Appeals Chamber recalls that the Trial Chamber found that Mr. Markač failed to order investigations of alleged criminal acts committed by members of the Special Police. The Trial Chamber concluded that, through this failure to act, Mr. Markač created a climate of impunity among members of the Special Police, which encouraged subsequent crimes committed by the Special Police, including murder and destruction of property.

The Appeals Chamber notes that the Trial Chamber did not explicitly find that Mr. Markač made a substantial contribution to relevant crimes committed by the Special Police or that he possessed effective control over the Special Police. Moreover the Appeals Chamber, Judge Agius and Judge Pocar dissenting, considers that all of the Trial Chamber’s findings on Mr. Markač’s culpability were made in the context of its finding of unlawful artillery attacks on the Four Towns.

Consequently, the Appeals Chamber finds that the Trial Chamber did not make findings sufficient, on their face, to enter convictions against Mr. Markač on the basis of either aiding and abetting or superior responsibility. In the absence of such findings, and considering the circumstances of this case, the Appeals Chamber, Judge Agius dissenting, declines to assess the Trial Chamber’s remaining findings and evidence on the record. Doing so would require the Appeals Chamber to engage in excessive fact finding and weighing of the evidence. The Appeals Chamber, Judge Agius and Judge Pocar dissenting, recalls that the existence of a JCE and unlawful artillery attacks underpin all of the material findings of the Trial Judgement. In this context, any attempt to derive inferences required for convictions under alternate modes of liability would risk substantially compromising Mr. Markač’s fair trial rights.

In light of the above, the Appeals Chamber, Judge Agius dissenting, will not enter convictions against Mr. Markač on the basis of alternate modes of liability.

Résumé du jugement rendu en application de l'article 74 du Statut dans l'affaire Le Procureur c. Mathieu Ngudjolo le 18 décembre 2012 par la Chambre de première instance II

Seul le prononcé fait foi

A. Introduction

1. La Chambre entend donner connaissance d’un résumé du jugement qu’elle rend aujourd’hui, en application de l’article 74 du Statut, sur la question de savoir si le Procureur a prouvé, au-delà de tout doute raisonnable, la culpabilité de l’accusé Mathieu Ngudjolo.

B. Charges retenues contre l’accusé

2. Le 26 septembre 2008, la Chambre préliminaire I a rendu la Décision relative à la confirmation des charges. Elle a alors confirmé, à l’unanimité, l’existence de preuves suffisantes donnant des motifs substantiels de croire que, lors de l’attaque lancée le 24 février 2003 contre la localité de Bogoro, située en Ituri au Nord Est de la République Démocratique du Congo (la « RDC »), Mathieu Ngudjolo et Germain Katanga :
   - ont commis conjointement par l’intermédiaire d’autres personnes, au sens de l’article 25-3-a du Statut, les crimes suivants, avec l’intention de les commettre :
     - le crime de guerre d’homicide intentionnel visé à l’article 8-2-a-i du Statut ;
     - le meurtre constitutif d’un crime contre l’humanité, visé à l’article 7-1-a du Statut ;
     - le crime de guerre consistant à diriger une attaque contre une population civile en tant que telle ou contre des civils qui ne participent pas directement aux hostilités, visé à l’article 8-2-b-xiii du Statut ;
     - le crime de guerre de pillage visé à l’article 8-2-b-xvi du Statut, en sachant que ce crime adviendrait dans le cours normal des événements ; et
     - que Mathieu Ngudjolo et Germain Katanga ont commis conjointement, au sens de l’article 25-3-a du Statut, le crime consistant à utiliser des enfants de moins de 15 ans pour les faire participer activement à des hostilités, constitutif d’un crime de guerre, visé à l’article 8-2-b-xxvi du Statut.

3. La Chambre préliminaire a également confirmé, mais à la majorité, qu’il existait des preuves suffisantes donnant des motifs de croire que, lors de l’attaque précitée, Mathieu Ngudjolo et Germain Katanga ont commis conjointement par l’intermédiaire d’autres personnes, au sens de l’article 25-3-a du Statut, les crimes suivants en sachant qu’ils adviendraient dans le cours normal des événements :
   - le crime de guerre de réduction en esclavage sexuel, visé à l’article 8-2-b-xii du statut ;
   - le crime de réduction en esclavage sexuel constitutif de crime contre l’humanité, visé à l’article 7-1-g du Statut ;
   - le crime de guerre de viol, visé à l’article 8-2-b-XXII du Statut ; et
   - le crime de viol constitutif de crime contre l’humanité, visé à l’article 7-1-g du Statut.

C. Compétence

4. Conformément à l’article 19-1 du Statut, la « Cour s’assure qu’elle est compétente pour connaître de toute affaire portée devant elle ». La RDC est

D. Bref rappel de la procédure

5. La Chambre a été constituée le 24 octobre 2008 et elle a tenu la première conférence de mise en état les 27 et 28 novembre 2008. Elle en a tenu 24 autres par la suite et elle a rendu 201 ordonnances et décisions écrites et orales avant que ne s’ouvrent les débats au fond. La Chambre entend limiter la présentation qu’elle compte faire à cet instant aux phases essentielles de la procédure ainsi qu’aux événements ayant pu avoir un effet significatif sur son déroulement. Elle rappelle toutefois dès à présent qu’elle a disjoint le cas de Mathieu Ngudjolo de celui de Germain Katanga par une décision rendue le 21 novembre 2012 et que, jusqu’à ce qu’intervienne cette décision, la procédure a été suivie contre ces deux accusés. Les débats se sont donc déroulés, dans leur intégralité, en leur présence commune.

6. Les débats sur le fond ont été ouverts le 25 novembre 2009, les parties et les participants ont alors présenté leurs déclarations liminaires et les deux accusés ont réitéré qu’ils plaidaient « non coupables ».

7. La présentation des éléments de preuve a débuté le 25 novembre 2009 et s’est achevée le 11 novembre 2011. Les 18 et 19 janvier 2012, la Chambre a effectué, en présence des parties, des participants et de représentants du greffe de la Cour, un transport judiciaire contradictoire en RDC. La présentation des moyens de preuve a été déclarée officiellement close le 7 février 2012.

8. Au cours des débats, la Chambre a entendu 54 témoins et elle a siégé 265 jours. Le Procureur a cité 24 témoins qui ont déposé entre le 26 novembre 2009 et le 8 décembre 2010. La Défense de Germain Katanga a appelé 17 témoins qui ont comparu entre le 24 mars et le 12 juillet 2011 et celle de Mathieu Ngudjolo a cité 11 témoins qui ont déposé entre le 15 août et le 16 septembre 2011. Trois des témoins de la Défense étaient communs aux deux équipes. Le représentant légal du groupe principal de victimes a cité deux victimes qui ont été entendues entre le 21 et le 25 février 2011. La Chambre a elle-même cité deux témoins.

9. Il convient également de souligner qu’une fois ces dépositions entendues, les deux accusés ont fait le choix de déposer eux aussi, en qualité de témoins et sous serment, et Mathieu Ngudjolo, en ce qui le concerne, a déposé durant sept audiences tenues entre le 27 octobre et le 11 novembre 2011.

11. Le Procureur a versé 261 pièces au dossier et la Défense de Mathieu Ngudjolo en a versé 132, celle de Germain Katanga en ayant, pour sa part, produit 240. Cinq pièces ont été versées par la Chambre et elle a autorisé les représentants légaux des victimes à en produire également cinq, ce qui représente un total de 643 pièces.
12. Conformément à l’article 68-3 du Statut, les victimes, au nombre de 366 dont 11 enfants soldats, ont été autorisées à participer à la procédure par l’intermédiaire de leurs représentants légaux. Ces derniers ont ainsi pu poser des questions aux témoins cités devant la Chambre, déposer des écritures en cours de procédure et, comme cela vient d’être rappelé, faire une déclaration liminaire, demander le versement de pièces au dossier, présenter par écrit des conclusions finales et développer oralement d’ultimes conclusions.

13. Enfin, comme cela vient également d’être rappelé, la Chambre, par décision du 21 novembre 2012 et statuant à la majorité, a décidé de mettre en œuvre la norme 55 du Règlement de la Cour en ce qui concerne le coaccusé Germain Katanga. Par voie de conséquence, elle a ordonné la disjonction des charges portées contre Mathieu Ngudjolo. Le présent résumé ne concerne donc que la seule situation de ce dernier.

14. Aux termes de l’article 66 du Statut, l’accusé est présumé innocent jusqu’à ce que le Procureur ait prouvé sa culpabilité. Pour condamner l’accusé, la Chambre doit être convaincue de sa culpabilité au-delà de tout doute raisonnable. Elle rappelle, sur ce point, que le principe d’établissement de la preuve « au-delà de tout doute raisonnable » doit être appliqué s’il s’agit d’établir l’existence d’un élément du crime ou du mode de responsabilité retenu contre l’accusé ou encore s’il s’agit d’établir l’existence d’un fait indispensable pour entrer en voie de condamnation.

15. La Chambre tient également à souligner que le fait qu’une allégation ne soit, selon elle, pas prouvée au-delà de tout doute raisonnable n’implique pas pour autant qu’elle mette en cause l’existence même du fait allégué. Cela signifie seulement qu’elle estime, au vu du standard de preuve, ne pas disposer de suffisamment de preuves fiables pour se prononcer sur la vérité du fait ainsi allégué. Dès lors, déclarer qu’un accusé n’est pas coupable ne veut pas nécessairement dire que la Chambre constate son innocence. Une telle décision démontre simplement que les preuves présentées au soutien de la culpabilité ne lui ont pas permis de se forger une conviction « au-delà de tout doute raisonnable. »

G. Démarche adoptée par la Chambre

16. La Chambre estime utile de donner quelques indications sur la manière dont a été conçu le jugement ainsi que sur la démarche qu’elle a adoptée. Après une « présentation générale » permettant de localiser Bogoro, de décrire l’accusé Mathieu Ngudjolo et de rappeler les charges que la Chambre préliminaire avait estimées suffisantes, la Chambre s’est livrée à un « bref historique de l’affaire » avant de préciser les « critères qu’elle a entendu retenir pour évaluer les preuves » produites devant elle.

17. Elle a ensuite consacré un développement à la « présentation des arguments des parties et des participants » puis elle a exposé la « démarche qu’elle a suivie et ses conclusions principales ». Elle a ensuite estimé nécessaire de formuler les observations qu’appelaient de sa part « les enquêtes » conduites, dans cette affaire, par le Bureau du Procureur avant de se concentrer sur les deux questions, qui sont au cœur même du jugement : « l’analyse de la crédibilité de certains témoins » et le rôle qu’a joué Mathieu Ngudjolo à l’époque des faits de la cause.

18. Au vu de l’évaluation qu’elle a faite de la crédibilité des témoins, la Chambre a analysé l’ensemble des éléments de preuve dont elle disposait afin d’établir quels faits étaient effectivement prouvés au-delà de tout doute raisonnable. Par ailleurs, elle ne s’est prononcée que dans la mesure où cela s’avérait...
nécessaire pour parvenir, en l’espèce, à une décision sur la culpabilité ou l’innocence de l’accusé. Cette approche lui est également apparue d’autant plus nécessaire et opportune que, eu égard à la Décision précitée du 21 novembre 2012 relative à la mise en œuvre de la norme 55 du Règlement de la Cour et disjoignant les charges portées contre Mathieu Ngudjolo, un jugement distinct devra être ultérieurement prononcé, au vu des mêmes éléments de preuve, en ce qui concerne Germain Katanga.

H. Analyse de la crédibilité de certains témoins

19. Il convient de souligner que, dans l’affaire qui concerne Mathieu Ngudjolo, la cause du Procureur, s’agissant de la responsabilité pénale de ce dernier, repose quasi-exclusivement sur les dépositions de trois témoins que la Chambre a qualifiés de « témoins clés ». Il s’agit des témoins P-250, P-279 et P-280 qui, pour le Procureur, auraient tous trois été membres de la milice de Bedu-Ezekere à l’époque des faits et auraient tous trois participé à l’attaque de Bogoro. Ces trois témoins ont tous bénéficié de mesures de protection de la Cour.

20. La crédibilité de ces témoins-clés a été vivement contestée en audience ainsi que dans les conclusions écrites de la Défense. Le Procureur leur a également consacré plusieurs pages dans ses Conclusions écrites afin de démontrer qu’ils étaient crédibles comme, et la Chambre reprend ses propres termes « ayant été au meilleur de leur capacité et de leur situation personnelle ». Au terme de l’examen auquel la Chambre s’est livrée, elle a considéré qu’indépendamment de certaines déclarations ou certains témoignages faisant douter de l’aptitude de ces témoins à déposer sur les faits de l’affaire, les propos qu’ils ont tenus s’avéraient, en définitive, par trop contradictoires ou imprécis pour qu’elle puisse prendre appui sur l’ensemble de leur déposition. Elle a donc estimé ne pouvoir se fonder sur leurs témoignages pris dans leur intégralité. La Chambre a jugé nécessaire de s’expliquer longuement sur la position qu’elle a ainsi entendu adopter en analysant très longuement les conditions dans lesquelles ces trois témoins ont déposé comme, bien entendu le contenu même de leur témoignage.

21. La Chambre s’est également attachée à analyser de près la crédibilité d’autres témoins, tels que P-28, P-219 et P-317, également cités par le Procureur. En ce qui concerne le témoin P-219, elle n’a, là encore, pas estimé pouvoir retenir l’ensemble de son témoignage. S’agissant du témoin P-28, elle est parvenue à une conclusion plus nuancée, tout en ne le considérant pas comme crédible lorsqu’il affirme avoir été milicien. En revanche, la Chambre a estimé qu’elle pouvait, dans l’ensemble, se fonder sur la déposition particulièrement crédible du témoin P-317.

22. La Chambre s’est enfin arrêtée sur les propos tenus par le témoin D03-88, chef du groupement de Bedu Ezekere où se trouvait l’accusé à l’époque des faits. Elle a estimé que ce témoin, cité par la Défense de Mathieu Ngudjolo, pouvait être globalement considéré comme crédible tout en soulignant que certains aspects de sa déposition, relatifs notamment à la responsabilité de l’accusé, méritaient d’être traités avec beaucoup de prudence.

I. Constatations factuelles sur le rôle de Mathieu Ngudjolo

23. Comme la Chambre l’a rappelé, conformément à la Décision relative à la confirmation des charges, Mathieu Ngudjolo est accusé d’avoir commis les crimes de meurtre, d’homicide intentionnel, d’attaque contre une population civile, de destruction de biens et de pillage, de viol et de réduction en esclavage sexuel, lors de l’attaque lancée contre Bogoro le 24 février 2003, et ce conjointement avec Germain Katanga par l'intermédiaire d'autres personnes, au sens de l'article 25-3-a du Statut. Il s'agit d'une forme de responsabilité qui combine la coaction avec la commission par l'intermédiaire d'une autre personne, autrement appelée, s'agissant de cette dernière, commission indirecte. Il est également accusé d'avoir commis conjointement avec Germain Katanga, au sens de l'article 25-3-a du Statut, le crime de guerre consistant à utiliser des enfants de moins de 15 ans pour les faire participer activement à des hostilités.

24. Pour évaluer la responsabilité pénale de l'accusé, la Chambre a choisi d'examiner en premier lieu, comme le Procureur a d'ailleurs lui-même estimé utile de le faire, l'aspect indirect de la forme de responsabilité alléguée, à savoir la commission par l'intermédiaire d'une autre personne. Elle s'est donc posée la question de savoir si Mathieu Ngudjolo avait commis les crimes qui lui sont reprochés par l'intermédiaire des commandants et des combattants lenda du groupement de Bedu-Ezekere, dont il aurait été le commandant en chef. Pour le Procureur en effet, l'accusé était le commandant en chef des commandants et des combattants lenda ayant participé à l'attaque de Bogoro le 24 février 2003.

25. Souhaitant procéder à une présentation des faits qui soit la plus neutre possible et la plus indépendante possible des critères juridiques développés par la Décision relative à la confirmation des charges au soutien de l'article 25-3-a du Statut, la présente Chambre a présenté ses conclusions factuelles relatives à l'ensemble des éléments de preuve concernant l'organisation et la structure des combattants lenda de Bedu-Ezekere dans la période pertinente ainsi que le rôle et les fonctions de Mathieu Ngudjolo.

26. À la lumière de tous les éléments de preuve en sa possession, la Chambre a tout d'abord constaté que, dans le contexte d'attaques incessantes lancées contre le groupement de Bedu-Ezekere entre 2001 et 2003 et compte tenu des conditions de vie très difficiles que de telles attaques imposaient aux habitants, un mouvement d'autodéfense s'est développé au sein du groupement. Elle n'a pas souscrit à la thèse de la Défense selon laquelle cette autodéfense ne relevait que d'un « comité de jeunes » constitué au sein d'une structure plus globale créée dans le groupement et appelée « Comité de base ». Les éléments de preuve dont elle disposait ne lui ont toutefois pas permis de déterminer avec précision la structure de cette autodéfense. Ils ne lui ont pas non plus permis de conclure, au-delà de tout doute raisonnable, que ce mouvement d'autodéfense s'était développé en prenant la forme d'une structure militaire dotée d'une chaîne hiérarchique définie, au sens où l'a allégué le Procureur.

27. La Chambre a cependant conclu, au delà de tout doute raisonnable, qu'à une certaine époque, entre 2001 et 2003, les combattants lenda du groupement de Bedu-Ezekere se sont regroupés autour de différentes positions qui, pour certaines, avaient à leur tête des commandants. Il est également ressorti de la preuve présente au dossier que ces combattants ne se bornaient pas à défendre le territoire du groupement en cas d'attaques mais qu'ils étaient en mesure de lancer eux aussi des attaques.

28. En ce qui concerne le rôle que jouait Mathieu Ngudjolo et les fonctions qu'il assumait dans ce mouvement, la Chambre a considéré qu'à la fin de l'année 2002, il avait une certaine importance au sein du groupement de Bedu-Ezekere du fait du statut de notable de sa famille, de ses relations haut placées en Ituri, des études qu'il avait suivies et de la formation militaire qu'il avait acquise dans la garde civile.

à Kambutso avant que ne se produise l'attaque de Bogoro. Elle a cependant tenu à souligner que ce statut d'infirmier n'excluait pas pour autant que Mathieu Ngudjolo ait pu occuper, en même temps, une position d'autorité au sein du groupe de combattants de Bedu-Ezekere, ce qui est la question essentielle de l'affaire qui le concerne.

30. Au surplus, la Chambre a relevé qu'un certain nombre d'interventions faites à ce moment-là par Mathieu Ngudjolo démontraient de sa part une très bonne connaissance de ce qui se passait en Ituri et qu'elles n'avaient pu être improvisées par un infirmier peu au fait de la situation de ce district. Dans un entretien qui s'est déroulé à la fin de mars 2003, il a en effet affirmé pu accéder à un grade militaire élevé, ce qui, selon lui, serait le fruit d'un

31. La Chambre n'a donc pas entendu souscrire à la thèse de la Défense selon laquelle Mathieu Ngudjolo n'était qu'un imposteur ayant réussi à tromper les témoins concernés par ses affirmations et que les témoins concernés n'ont donc aucun autre déni sur l'autorité dont il aurait alors, selon eux, disposé. Mathieu Ngudjolo a donc réellement occupé réellement avant l'attaque de Bogoro. Pour toutes ces raisons, la Chambre ne peut donc accorder à leur propos qu'une très faible valeur probante.

34. En ce qui concerne des révélations que l’accusé aurait faites à deux reprises, une première fois au témoin P-317, en lui disant qu’il aurait organisé les attaques de Bogoro et de Mandro, et une seconde fois, à un membre du Ministère public congolais dans le cadre d’une procédure distincte, en indiquant qu’il avait « dirigé l’opération du 6 mars 2003 à Bunia seulement », la Chambre, tout en relevant que les propos qu’a alors tenus Mathieu Ngudjolo étaient à la fois incertains et insuffisamment précis, ne peut en outre que noter l’existence d’un certain manque de cohérence entre ces deux éléments de preuve. En effet, l’un ne mentionne pas la participation de Mathieu Ngudjolo à la bataille de Bunia et l’autre ne fait pas état de sa participation aux combats de Bogoro et de Mandro. Dès lors, et bien que ne remettant aucunement en cause la crédibilité de P-317 ni la fiabilité du document remis par les autorités congolaises, elle a estimé ne pouvoir considérer qu’avec circonspection les révélations alors faites par Mathieu Ngudjolo.

35. La Chambre a également examiné avec attention, comme le Procureur l’a d’ailleurs invité à le faire, tous les éléments de preuve démontrant que Mathieu Ngudjolo avait eu un rôle actif, comme cela vient d’être rappelé, lors de plusieurs manifestations officielles ayant eu lieu en Ituri au cours du mois de mars 2003.

36. Mais ces éléments de preuve, tous postérieurs à l’attaque de Bogoro, ne lui ont pas permis d’inférer, au-delà de tout doute raisonnable, que cet accusé était effectivement le commandant en chef des combattants Lendu de Bedu-Ezekere présents à Bogoro le 24 février 2003.

37. Si la Chambre a retenu le fait que, dès ses premières apparitions publiques au mois de mars 2003 et, en particulier, lors de la première réunion tenue avec le général Kale Kayihura, l’accusé portait un uniforme militaire, elle a aussi remarqué que le grade de colonel, que l’accusé affirme s’être lui-même attribué, n’était mentionné que lors de la signature de l’Accord de cessation des hostilités du 18 mars 2003. Et elle ne dispose d’aucun autre élément de preuve fiable, antérieur à cette date, qui lui permette d’inférer, au-delà de tout doute raisonnable, que Mathieu Ngudjolo était le commandant en chef des combattants lendu de Bedu-Ezekere. On ne peut, par ailleurs, nécessairement et totalement exclure, dans le contexte politico-militaire de l’époque, que Mathieu Ngudjolo ait pu s’imposer, en tant que militaire, comme un interlocuteur incontournable après la bataille de Bogoro et après celle-ci seulement. Au surplus, la Chambre estime que sa nomination le 22 mars 2003 à un poste aussi élevé que celui de chef d’état-major adjoint chargé des opérations au sein de l’alliance FNI-FRPI ne démontre pas obligatoirement qu’il était déjà un important chef militaire auparavant, notamment le 24 février 2003.

38. En concluant cette partie de son jugement, la Chambre a considéré que, dans le contexte qui prévalait alors dans le groupement de Bedu-Ezekere, Mathieu Ngudjolo, en raison de son statut social, de l’expérience qu’il avait acquise en matière militaire et des relations qu’il entretenait avec différents responsables régionaux était tout naturellement conduit à jouer un rôle dépassant le strict cadre de son activité médicale. Et sa participation, active et en qualité de colonel, aux diverses réunions dont il a déjà été fait état et qui se sont tenues après le 18 mars 2003 ainsi que le contenu des témoignages relatifs à son rôle précédant l’attaque, ont effectivement conduit la Chambre à s’interroger sur ce qu’étaient ses activités militaires exactes à cette époque.
39. A cet égard, elle a estimé ne pouvoir exclure qu’il ait été, lors des faits soumis à son examen, l’un des commandants militaires ayant occupé une place importante parmi les combattants lendu du groupement de Bedu-Ezekere mais elle a souligné qu’elle n’était pas en mesure de l’établir au-delà de tout doute raisonnable.

40. De plus, la Chambre a entendu ajouter qu’en tout état de cause, elle ne disposait pas, compte tenu de son analyse, d’éléments de preuve crédibles permettant de considérer que Mathieu Ngudjolo aurait donné des ordres et des directives militaires ou pris des mesures pour en faire assurer le respect ou encore engagé des procédures disciplinaires ou prononcé des sanctions de cette nature.

41. Au vu de l’ensemble des éléments de preuve figurant au dossier, la Chambre n’a dès lors pas pu conclure, au-delà de tout doute raisonnable, que l’accusé était le chef des combattants lendu ayant participé à l’attaque de Bogoro le 24 février 2003.

J. L’utilisation d’enfants soldats de moins de 15 ans

42. La Chambre préliminaire a conclu qu’il existait des preuves suffisantes donnant des motifs substantiels de croire que Mathieu Ngudjolo a utilisé des enfants de moins de 15 ans à des fins multiples et « pour les faire participer activement […] avant, pendant et après l’attaque » menée le 24 février 2003 contre le village de Bogoro2. Selon elle les enfants étaient incorporés dans les milices, recevaient une formation militaire sur ordre de l’accusé, effectuaient fréquemment des parades en sa présence et étaient utilisés par Mathieu Ngudjolo soit dans son escorte soit comme gardes du corps personnels3.

K. Autres allégations du Procureur

43. Au vu des différents éléments de preuve en sa possession, la Chambre a considéré que la présence d’enfants dans les groupes de combattants existant en Ituri était, au moment des faits, un phénomène généralisé et que cette présence concernait également le territoire de Djugu dans lequel se trouve le groupement de Bedu-Ezekere. La Chambre a par ailleurs constaté que des enfants de moins de 15 ans, venant du groupement de Bedu-Ezekere, étaient présents lors de l’attaque de Bogoro du 24 février 2003. Mais elle n’a pu aussi que constater qu’elle ne disposait pas de suffisamment d’éléments de preuve démontrant, par exemple, l’existence de formations militaires données à des enfants de moins de 15 ans sur ordre de l’accusé, leur utilisation, par ce dernier, en tant que gardes du corps personnels ou à toute autre fin, avant, pendant et après l’attaque, ce qui ne lui a pas permis d’établir, au-delà de tout doute raisonnable, l’existence d’un lien entre ce dernier et les enfants présents à Bogoro le 24 février 2003.

44. En ce qui concerne les allégations factuelles relatives à l’implication de Mathieu Ngudjolo dans l’élaboration et la mise en œuvre du plan visant à « effacer » Bogoro, la Chambre a constaté que, selon la Chambre préliminaire, l’implication de l’accusé était étroitement liée à la position d’autorité ainsi qu’au contrôle qu’il aurait exercé sur l’ensemble des commandants et des combattants de Bedu-Ezekere ayant participé à l’attaque du 24 février 20034. Il convient de souligner que la Décision relative à la confirmation des charges n’envisage pas la coaction pour les crimes confirmés, en dehors, bien entendu, du crime consistant à utiliser des enfants de moins de 15 ans pour les faire participer activement à des hostilités. Au vu des conclusions factuelles auxquelles elle est parvenue sur le rôle que jouait l’accusé au sein du

45. Toujours au vu des constatations factuelles effectuées sur le rôle que jouait alors l’accusé, la Chambre n’a pas estimé devoir développer de conclusions au-delà de tout doute raisonnable, ni en fait, ni en droit, en ce concerne les éléments des crimes reprochés en l’espèce dans la mesure où ces questions sont sans conséquence sur l’issue de la présente affaire. Cette approche lui est apparue d’autant plus justifiée que de telles conclusions pourraient avoir une incidence sur la poursuite du procès en ce qui concerne Germain Katanga. Pour autant, la démarche que la Chambre a entendu adopter ne signifie en aucun cas, pour elle, que des crimes n’auraient pas été commis à Bogoro le 24 février 2003, pas plus qu’elle ne saurait remettre en cause ce qu’a subi ce jour-là la population de cette localité.

46. Dans son jugement, la Chambre a d’ailleurs jugé nécessaire de donner une description générale du déroulement de l’attaque de Bogoro et des actes de violence qui y auraient été perpétrés le 24 février 2003, étant entendu que, comme cela vient d’être souligné, cette démarche ne consiste pas à présenter des conclusions au-delà de tout doute raisonnable sur les éléments matériels des crimes.

Conclusion

47. La Chambre a pris sa décision à l’unanimité. La juge Van Den Wyngaert a entendu joindre au jugement une opinion concordante relative à l’interprétation de l’article 25-3-a du Statut.

48. Au vu des constatations factuelles auxquelles elle s’est livrée et après avoir examiné l’ensemble des éléments de preuve figurant au dossier, la Chambre conclut que le Procureur n’a pas prouvé au-delà de tout doute raisonnable que Mathieu Ngudjolo a commis, sur le fondement de l’article 25-3-a du Statut, les différents crimes allégués.
