ARTICLE 24

TEXT OF ARTICLE 24

1. In order to ensure prompt and effective action by the United Nations, its Members confer on the Security Council primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security, and agree that in carrying out its duties under this responsibility the Security Council acts on their behalf.

2. In discharging these duties the Security Council shall act in accordance with the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations. The specific powers granted to the Security Council for the discharge of these duties are laid down in Chapters VI, VII, VIII, and XII.

3. The Security Council shall submit annual and, when necessary, special reports to the General Assembly for its consideration.

INTRODUCTORY NOTE

1. The primary character of the responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security conferred upon the Security Council by Article 24 is also reflected in the terms of Article 11 (2), where it is provided that any question on which action is necessary should be referred to the Security Council by the General Assembly, and in the provisions of Article 12 (1) which, together with those of Articles 10, 11 (2) and 14, limit the authority of the General Assembly in respect of any dispute or situation while the Security Council is exercising the functions assigned to it by the Charter.

2. As indicated in the Repertory and its Supplements Nos. 1-4, examination of the practice of United Nations organs in respect of an Article of such broad scope as Article 24 has necessarily been confined to matters which have arisen only in the proceedings of the Security Council. The practice of the General Assembly in connexion with the maintenance of international peace and security, though relevant to a better understanding of the subject as a whole, is dealt with under the Articles governing the functions and powers of the General Assembly.

3. Article 24 defines the general field of responsibility of the Security Council for the maintenance of international peace and security but, as indicated in its paragraph 2, other Articles of the Charter set forth the specific powers granted to the Council for the discharge of that responsibility. The analysis of the decisions of the Council in the Repertory under Article 24 has been, therefore, confined to those questions bearing upon the main questions which arose in the proceedings of the Council in connexion with its general responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security, as distinct from its specific powers defined in other relevant Articles. Since no constitutional discussion on this general responsibility of the Security Council took place in its proceedings or in those of the General Assembly during the period under review, this study consists only of a Summary of Practice.

4. For reasons explained in the previous Repertory studies, questions considered by the Security Council under its responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security as provided for in Article 24 (1) and (2), and the decisions adopted by the Council in connexion with these questions, are presented in this study in the form of two annexes.

5. Annex I contains a list of questions which the Security Council has considered under its responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security as provided for in Article 24 (1) and (2), during the period under review. The range of questions on the list may be deemed to fall under Chapters VI and VII of the Charter.

6. Annex II contains a tabulation of various measures provided for in positive decisions of the Security Council adopted in connexion with questions considered under its responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security. As indicated in previous Repertory studies, the headings in the tabulation have been devised for convenience of presentation and no constitutional significance should be attached to the inclusion of any particular decision under any given heading.

SUMMARY OF PRACTICE

A. Article 24 (1) and (2)

7. During the period under review, Article 24 was explicitly cited by the United States of America in its letter dated 7 October 1973 calling for a meeting of the Security Council in connexion with the situation in the Middle East, as well as in the preambles of three draft resolutions, one submitted to the Security Council by Burundi, Sierra Leone, Somalia and Syrian Arab Republic in connexion with a complaint by Zambia and two circulated in the Security Council as a result of consultations among members of the Council in connexion with the situation in Cyprus. The consideration of these texts did not involve any constitutional discussion.

8. The draft resolution submitted in connexion with the complaint by Zambia was adopted, in its revised form, as resolution 300 (1971) of 12 October 1971, which no

1 See this Supplement, under Articles 10, 11, 12 and 14.
3 In connexion with this agenda item, there was also an incidental explicit reference to Article 24 in a letter dated 30 March 1976 from the representative of Israel addressed to the Secretary-General. S C (31), Suppl. for Jan.-March, 1976, S/12028.
longer contained an explicit reference to Article 24. The fifth preambular paragraph of that resolution, however, may be considered to contain an implicit reference to Article 24 in so far as it stated that the Security Council was "Mindful of its responsibility to take effective collective measures for the prevention and removal of threats to international peace and security". Similarly, the fifth preambular paragraph of resolution 290 (1970) of 8 December 1970, adopted in connexion with the complaint by Burundi, may be considered to have an implicit bearing on Article 24 in so far as it stated that the Council was "Mindful of its responsibility to take effective collective measures for the prevention and removal of threats to international peace and security."

9. Of the two draft resolutions circulated in connexion with the situation in Cyprus, both of which contained the same explicit invocation of Article 24, one was adopted as resolution 353 (1974) of 20 July 1974 and the other one was not put to a vote.

10. During the period under review, resolutions adopted by the Security Council and a draft resolution submitted to the Council contained preambular paragraphs in which the language of Article 24 was used, but during their consideration no constitutional discussion arose.

11. In resolution 303 (1971) of 6 December 1971, adopted in connexion with the situation in the India/Pakistan subcontinent, the Security Council "Taking into account that the lack of unanimity of its permanent members at the 1606th and 1607th meetings of the Security Council has prevented it from exercising its primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security", decided to refer the question under consideration to the General Assembly at its twenty-sixth session, as provided for in Assembly resolution 377 A (V) of 3 November 1950.

12. In resolution 417 (1977) of 31 October 1977, adopted in connexion with the question of South Africa, the Security Council "Mindful of its responsibilities under the Charter of the United Nations for the maintenance of international peace and security" inter alia strongly condemned South Africa for its resort to massive violence and repression against the black people and other opponents of apartheid.

13. The above-mentioned draft resolution was submitted to the Security Council by Burundi, Nepal, Sierra Leone, Syria and Zambia in connexion with the question of race conflict in South Africa resulting from the policies of apartheid of the Government of the Republic of South Africa; under the terms of the last preambular paragraph and operative paragraph 1 of that draft resolution, the Security Council "Taking note that the permanent members of the Security Council have a primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security and thus are under a special obligation to abide by the resolutions of the Security Council", would reiterate its total opposition to the policies of apartheid of the Government of the Republic of South Africa. The draft resolution, in its revised form from which the last preambular paragraph was deleted, was adopted as resolution 282 (1970) of 23 July 1970.

14. The language of Article 24 was used also in the communiqué issued by the Secretary-General at the close of the first periodic meeting of the Security Council in accordance with rule 55 of the provisional rules of procedure of the Council. Paragraph 6 of that communiqué stated that "In view of the primary responsibility of the Security Council for the maintenance of international peace and security, members of the Council emphasized the importance of reaching early agreement on guidelines for future peace-keeping operations in conformity with the Charter."

15. During the period under review, the issue of the general powers of the Security Council, more specifically the question whether the Council has specific powers, as laid down in Chapters VI, VII, VIII and XII of the Charter only, or whether it may exercise such other powers, consistent with the Purposes and Principles of the Charter, as are necessary for it to discharge its responsibilities, came up in connexion with the consideration by the Security Council of the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice rendered on 21 June 1971 in connexion with the question of Namibia.

16. By its resolution 284 (1970) of 29 July 1970 the Security Council had asked the Court for its advice on "the legal consequences for States of the continued presence of South Africa in Namibia, notwithstanding Security Council resolution 276 (1970)". Under resolution 276 (1970) of 30 January 1970, the Council had declared that the continued presence of the South African authorities in Namibia was illegal and that all acts by the South African Government on behalf of or concerning Namibia subsequent to the General Assembly's decision to terminate the mandate were illegal and invalid.

17. The Court, in arriving at its opinion, considered that the legal basis of resolution 276 (1970) was the authority vested in the Security Council under Article 24 of the Charter. According to the Court, the reference in Article 24 (2) to specific powers of the Council under certain Chapters of the Charter did not exclude the existence of general powers to discharge the responsibilities conferred in paragraph 1. In this connexion the Court made reference to a statement by the representative of the Secretary-General in 1947 to the effect that "the powers of the Council under Article 24 are not restricted to the specific grants of authority contained in Chapters VI, VII, VIII and XIII . . . the Members of the United Nations have conferred upon the Security Council powers commensurate with its responsibility for the maintenance of peace and security. The only limitations are the fundamental principles and purposes found in Chapter 1 of the Charter."

18. While the majority of the members of the Security Council agreed with the conclusions of the Court on the main question put to it, the observation was made that the opinions expressed by the Court on various other questions, some of which involved constitutional problems, might raise controversial issues, such as a far-reaching interpretation of various Articles of the Charter, 13, 14, 15, 16.
including Article 24, which were not essential for dealing with the question of Namibia. It was also asserted that, if the interpretations of various provisions of the Charter, including Article 24, were to give rise to reservations among Member States, it was doubtful that the Security Council would be the appropriate forum in which to debate them.

19. Explicit and implicit references to Article 24 were made in the Security Council in connexion with the consideration of various questions but there was no constitutional discussion.

20. There was one instance in which Article 24 was invoked by the representative of a permanent member of the Security Council to emphasize the position of his Government regarding Article 24, stated only by the Purposes and Principles of the Charter, which may be a precedent for future action by the Council on matters concerning the maintenance of international peace and security. The point was made also that, to enable the Council to do so, a subsidiary organ could be set up whose purview of the general mandate of the Security Council in the matter of peace-keeping and the maintenance of international security. He emphasized that his Government considered that the competence of the Council should not be limited simply to the establishment of an international force, but that the Council should also have control over all operations that might be ordered by it. Thus it was for the Council to define the force’s terms of reference, its duration, its size and its decisions on the appointment of the commander, the basic directives to be given to the commander; to prepare the method of financing; and to ensure constant control over the application of its directives. The point was made also that, to enable the Council to do so, a subsidiary organ could be set up whose purview of the Council’s work would be limited to the primary responsibilities conferred upon the Council by the Charter.

21. In another instance, Article 24 was cited to make the point that, in so far as the Security Council was entrusted with the responsibility to act on behalf of the Members of the United Nations, it was in duty bound to take into consideration the general views of the Member States, as expressed in resolutions adopted by the General Assembly.

22. Finally, on two occasions during the period under review, the Security Council took decisions and, on a third occasion, statements were made in the Council which might be considered implicitly to fall within the purview of the general mandate of the Security Council under Article 24.

23. In 1970 and again in 1972, the Council took decisions by consensus, in the first instance at a formal meeting, and in the second instance without a meeting, in connexion with the situation created by increasing incidents involving hijacking of commercial aircraft. In connexion with this item, the Security Council did not pronounce itself either in 1970 or in 1972 on the question of the Charter Article under which it acted.

24. In 1976, during the consideration of a complaint concerning developments following an incident of hijacking of a commercial aircraft, the observation was made that international action to ensure that future acts of hijacking did not succeed would contribute to the fulfillment of the primary aim of the Council in helping to maintain international peace and security. Such international action, it was noted, required bringing together the concern of the international community for the necessity to ensure safety of international civil aviation, the consideration that States exist for the protection of their peoples, and the principle of respect for national sovereignty and territorial integrity.

25. It was also suggested that the Security Council should not only record its collective view that international terrorism, and specifically hijacking, must be stopped but should also address itself to “the international crime of terrorist hijacking” as one of the most dangerous threats to peace and security in the world.

26. The view was also expressed that incidents such as the one under consideration demanded concerted efforts.
action on the part of the Security Council and the General Assembly to eradicate the underlying causes of terrorism. 27. 28. During the period under review, one resolution was adopted by the General Assembly in which Article 24 was explicitly invoked. Thus, in the second preambular paragraph of resolution 3283 (XXIX) of 12 December 1974 on peaceful settlement of disputes, the General Assembly recalled, in particular, that the Security Council was charged under the terms of Article 24 of the Charter with the primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security, and that disputes may be brought to the attention of the Council for purposes of pacific settlement under the provisions of Chapter VI of the Charter.

28. There were also several instances in which the General Assembly adopted resolutions including provisions in which language similar to that of Article 24 was utilized. 29. There was no constitutional discussion in the proceedings leading to the adoption of those resolutions. In paragraph 13 of its resolution 2734 (XXV) of 16 December 1970 containing the Declaration on the Strengthening of International Security, the General Assembly called upon the Security Council, including the permanent members, to intensify efforts to discharge, in conformity with the Charter, its primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security. That recommendation was reiterated in paragraph 2 of General Assembly resolution 32/154 on implementation of the Declaration on the Strengthening of International Security.

30. In the fifth preambular paragraph of its resolution 3234 B (XXIX) of 16 December 1974 and in the seventh preambular paragraph of its resolution 31/6 D of 9 November 1976 on policies of apartheid of the Government of South Africa, the General Assembly was inter alia "mindful" of the primary responsibility of the Security Council for the maintenance of international peace and security. 31. By the third preambular paragraph of its resolution 33/14 of 18 December 1978, on the comprehensive review of the whole question of peace-keeping operations in all their aspects, the General Assembly reaffirmed the primary responsibility of the Security Council for the maintenance of international peace and security.

32. Article 24 was explicitly and implicitly invoked in passim in proceedings of the General Assembly 28 and its Committees 28 in connection with various agenda items. The Article was repeatedly cited to draw attention to the principles laid down in its provisions, namely: that the Members of the United Nations conferred on the Council primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security, and the duty of the United Nations to intervene by all means available to Members of the United Nations. In this connexion, attention was drawn to the fact that the powers of the Security Council and those of the General Assembly were complementary and not contradictory, since paragraph 1 of Article 24 provided that, in carrying out its duties under its responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security, the Council acted on behalf of Member States.

35. Rights and duties assumed by Member States under the provisions of Article 24 were recalled also in the discussions regarding effective functioning of United Nations peace-keeping forces, in particular, the necessity that the forces must operate with the full co-operation of the parties concerned. It was maintained that the composition of the Security Council, which represented all groups of States, and its special role and responsibility under the Charter, established firm bases for working out agreed guidelines for United Nations peace-keeping operations. It was noted that the Council, as the main United Nations organ responsible for restoring or preserving peace on behalf of Member States, had the ultimate authority to establish, direct and control peace-keeping operations.

36. In connexion with the question of defining aggression, the observation was also made that, in applying the definition to individual cases of aggression, the Security Council, as the organ primarily responsible for the maintenance of international peace and security, would not be exercising discretionary power; rather, it would be acting according to Article 24 (2) of the Charter.

B. Article 24 (3)

37. Article 24 (3), in conjunction with Article 15 (1), places upon the Security Council the obligation to submit annual and, when necessary, special reports to the General Assembly on how it has discharged the responsibility conferred upon it by the Members for the maintenance of international peace and security. During the period under review, the Security Council submitted its twenty-fifth through thirty-third annual reports, as well as special reports. All the special reports concerned the admission of new Members.37

38. The accepted procedure with regard to the preparation of annual reports includes the following stages:

(a) formulation of the first draft by the Secretariat;
(b) circulation of this draft as a confidential document among the members of the Council;
(c) discussion of proposals for changes and submission of observations at a closed meeting of the Council;
(d) full approval at a closed meeting of the Council, following which the annual report of the Security Council is published as a General Assembly document and submitted for the consideration of the Assembly.

39. Consideration of the annual report of the Security Council by the General Assembly has continued to be a formality. The General Assembly has not debated the substance of the annual report submitted by the Council but has adopted38 resolutions taking note of the report.

40. It should be noted, however, that, at its twenty-sixth and twenty-seventh sessions, the Assembly, in connexion with its consideration of the Council's report, decided to seek the views of Member States on ways and means of enhancing the effectiveness of the Council in accordance with the principles and provisions of the Charter.39 At its twenty-eighth session, in its resolution 3186 (XXVIII), the Assembly drew the attention of the Council, when considering steps to enhance its effectiveness in accordance with the principles and provisions of the Charter, to the views and suggestions submitted by Member States in response to the above-mentioned resolutions as contained in the Secretary-General's reports on the matter.40 At its twenty-ninth session, in its resolution 3322 (XXIX), the Assembly recalled the resolutions adopted at the three preceeding sessions. No final decision was taken on this matter by the General Assembly during the period under review.

41. It should also be noted that Article 24 (3) was explicitly cited in a note41 by the President of the Security Council regarding a decision by the Council to make its annual report to the General Assembly shorter and more concise without changing its basic structure.
