ARTICLE 29

TEXT OF ARTICLE 29

The Security Council may establish such subsidiary organs as it deems necessary for the performance of its functions.

NOTE

1. During the period under review, the Security Council has not established any new subsidiary organs nor has it terminated any of its still existing subsidiary organs. 1/

2. The two standing committees of the Security Council, the Committee of Experts and the Committee on the Admission of New Members, have held no meetings during this period. Although the Security Council has received four new applications for membership, it has considered all of them directly without reference to the Committee on the Admission of New Members.

1/ The United Nations Commission for Indonesia (adjourned sine die on 3 April 1951); the United Nations Representative for India and Pakistan; the United Nations Truce Supervision Organization in Palestine.